VOL. XVIII.....NO. 5467. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1869. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

WASHINGTON.

Final Settlement of the Tenure-of-Office Question.

A Compromise Bill Reported by the Conference Committee.

The Report Immediately Adopted by Both Houses.

President Grant Fully Invested with the Control of Civil Offices.

Great Rejoicing Among the Crowds of Office-Seekers.

No Prospect of a Speedy Adjournment of Congress.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, March 31.

The Tenure-of-Office act is substantially among the things that were. Though not absolutely repealed in terms, the compromise agreed upon in both Houses to-day, and now awaiting the President's signature, leaves so little of the original act in force that its existence will be forgotten.

When the Conference Committee met this morning they at once agreed to disagree, three standing for repeal and three for the Senate bill. But Senator TRUMBULL asked the House managers what was objectionable in that bill. BUTLER replied that the chief objection was the power retained by the Senate to veto removals of the President. Finally, Judge BINGHAM offered a skillfully-drawn amendment, which recognized the power of the President to make an absolute removal, but styled it a suspension. Such suspensions to be made at the discretion of the President, and all nominations made during recess to be sent to the Senate within thirty days after it assembles at each session. In case any nomination in place of a suspended officer be not confirmed, the office becomes vacant, the former incumbent not reverting to the position as heretofore, which is, in effect, precisely the same as an absolute removal.

This has been the one single principle that the Senate has insisted upon from the beginning—to wit, that the President had no more power to remove without the consent of the Senate than he had to appoint. But it is as completely surrendered here as though it had been a simple act of repeal.

The provision requiring the President to send in all nominations during the recess, within thirty days of the meeting of the Senate, is a very proper one, and General GRANT, himself, has said that he would like to see it in the law.

When the report was made to the House, Judge BINGHAM and General BUTLER explained it, but many of the friends of total repeal, when they heard the report read, were at a loss to know why the House managers had not secured a repeal in plain words, instead of repeal in such elaborate terms. Judge DAVIS, Judge POLAND, LOGAN, BANKS and HOAR, all insisted that it was a surrender of the point that the Senate bill had contended for, but thought it ought to have been put in plainer phrase. BINGHAM said it was in effect a repeal, yet it retained and reasserted the vital principle that the whole question of the power of the President to make appointments and removals was subject to the control of the law-making power.

Finally the previous question was seconded, and the report was agreed to, yeas 108, nays 67. Eighteen Republicans voted in the negative, viz.: Beatty of Ohio, Benton of New-Hampshire, Boyd of Missouri, Clarke of Kansas, Davis of New-York, Deweese of North Carolina, Ferry of Michigan, Hawkins of Tennessee, Hoar of Massachusetts, Julian and Orth of Indiana, Loughridge of Iowa, Polland, Smith and Willard of Vermont, Rogers of Arkansas, Whittemore of South Carolina, Wilkinson of Minnesota. In the Senate there was, to the surprise of all, very little discussion. Mr. TRUMBULL briefly explained the report, and Mr. THURMAN spoke briefly in opposition to the bill. It was then agreed to by a vote of 42 to 8, Mr. SPRAGUE being the only Republican voting in the negative. There were present, but not voting, the following Republicans: Fessenden, Cole, Howe, McDonald, Robertson, Ross, Sherman and Warner. Mr. SHERMAN was paired with Mr. CHANDLER, who is absent. Messrs. MORTON, STEWART and THAYER were also absent. The bill will reach the President to-morrow.

THE OFFICE-SEEKERS.

The patient office-seekers, so long in waiting, are in great good humor to-night, and the pressure on the President and Departments will be redoubled to-morrow. Members of the House have been so annoyed by the presence upon the floor each day, just before the hour of meeting, 12 o'clock, of great numbers of their patriotic constituents besieging them to sign all kinds of papers, that the Committee on Rules to-day reported a new rule, which was adopted, requiring the Doorkeeper to clear the floor of all persons not privileged thereto at 11:50 o'clock. As most of the members do not arrive until after this time, they will hereafter escape this annoyance in a great measure.

THE ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.

The question of the final adjournment of Congress has not been decided yet, but the indications are that it will take place about the 10th or 15th of April. The resolution of the House to adjourn on the 6th was considered in the Senate to-day, and was favored by the majority of those Senators who spoke on the subject. The number of these, however, was not more than half a dozen; Mr. SUMNER was the principal opponent of so early an adjournment. He considered that Senators should not, in justice to themselves and to the country, separate until the reconstruction of Georgia and the other Southern States had been settled. Mr. ANTHONY thought those States could remain without much detriment as they are for some time longer. Mr. CONKLING made the point in reply to Mr. SUMNER, that the people had just elected an Executive, in whom general confidence was felt, and that so far Congress had received no message asking for any further legislation. Mr. SHERMAN thought that among the measures of absolutely necessary legislation, was one in reference to the squabble between the Pacific Railroads. But the reconstruction question was deemed the most important one by all, and the probabilities are that the question will have to be settled in some way before the session is closed. The morning hour expired pending the debate, and no action was taken on the resolution.

BUSINESS DISQUALIFICATION.

The act of 1789, organizing the Treasury Department, is again likely to be the means of depriving the Government of the services of a first-class business man and officer. Hon. GEORGE A. HALSEY, of New-Jersey, had decided, though reluctantly, to accept the position of Register of the Treasury, tendered him by Secretary BOUTWELL, but as Mr. HALSEY is largely engaged in manufacturing, both Mr. BOUTWELL and himself thought best to submit the question of eligibility to the Attorney-General before sending the name to the Senate. The latter officer has the subject now under consideration. As the matter stands, Mr. HALSEY cannot abandon his business; and if it is decided that he comes within the act, the Department and the country will again be deprived of the services of a man who takes office, if at all, solely for the public good.

WHISKY IN BOND.

During the discussion yesterday on the amendatory Whisky and Tobacco Tax bill, several statements were given as to the probable amount of whisky now in bonded warehouses. These were all too low. Inquiry at the Internal Revenue Bureau shows that on the 1st of February there was on hand about 10,000,000 gallons. The reports are not made up to a late date, but as whisky is going out very slowly, it is estimated that there are nearly 9,000,000 gallons on hand now, which will probably be not far from the amount that will remain at the expiration of the time for withdrawal.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.

The investigation into the issue of bond subsidy to the Central Pacific Railroad was begun this morning before the House Pacific Railroad Committee. Messrs. CALEB CUSHING and W. E. CHANDLER appeared for the Union Pacific Company, and L. R. CHITTENDEN for the Central Pacific. Mr. CHANDLER opened in behalf of the first-named corporation, and stated what they expected to prove in the matter at issue. No further progress was made beyond his statement. The investigation will be continued to-morrow. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary oft he Interior have been subpœnaed to appear, and directed to bring with them all the papers in their respective Departments bearing on the question in dispute.

THE NOMINATION OF GENERAL LONGSTREET.

The nomination of General LONGSTREET to be Surveyor of the Port of New-Orleans was considered in Executive session to-day. Senator KELLOGG moved his confirmation, and the subject was thrown open to discussion. Senator BROWNLOW sent some remarks to the Executive Clerk to be read in opposition to LONGSTREET. He made a terrible onslaught on him, reciting his services to the rebellion and his course toward Union men in Tennessee, and maintaining that his confirmation for so important and lucrative a position would be an insult to the dead and an injustice to the living. Remarks pro and con were made by several other Senators, after which the adjournment took place.

MINISTER HALE AND SECRETARY PERRY.

The correspondence between Minister HALE and Mr. PERRY, Secretary of Legation, which was furnished by the Secretary of State in compliance with a resolution of the Senate some days ago, was considered in the Executive session of the Senate to-day, and discussed at some length. It is exceedingly voluminous, and embraces letters from Mr. HALE to Mr. SEWARD and replies, and also communications to and from Mr. PERRY. The Senate, at the suggestion of the Foreign Relations Committee, have decided not to print it until they shall have agreed on the course to be pursued in reference to the whole subject.

THE INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

The Senate made fair progress to-day on the Indian Appropriation bill, which failed in Conference Committee at the last session. The items rejected by the House will be again insisted upon by the Senate, and the bill will be finished in the Senate on Friday at furthest.

NOMINATIONS EXPECTED.

The politicians are in a state of the greatest excitement to-night, in anticipation of a large batch of nominations being sent in to-morrow. The reasonably large lists sent in to-day were all referred to their appropriate committees in the afternoon Executive session.

BANQUET TO SENATOR SCHURZ.

Hon. CARL SCHURZ was the recipient of a complimentary banquet to-night in honor of his election to the United States Senate. None but Germans, regardless of politics, but friendly to Mr. SCHURZ, were present.

EMPLOYMENT FOR COLORED MEN.

It is announced to-night that a large number of colored men will be employed as laborers and watchmen at the Treasury Department during the next few days.

VISITORS AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

The President received but few visitors at the White House to-day, the number of whom was not, however, as large as on other occasions within the last few weeks. In the afternoon he took a walk in the direction of Georgetown, paying a visit to the War Department on his return.

FOREIGN MISSIONS AND CONSULSHIPS.

From the number of applications at the State Department, it appears that an alarming percentage of the politicians of the country are in a delicate state of health. The rush for foreign Missions and Consulships is very great, and the struggle for these positions is fully as energetic as for appointments in the other branches of the Government service. The politicians have it that in case Mr. JOHN JAY should be sent to England, Mr. MOTLEY will return to Austria.

DR. MARY E. WALKER.

The advocates of the Women's Rights movement will be glad to hear that Dr. MARY E. WALKER was not denied an interview by the President on account of her semi-masculine attire. She contradicts the statement to that effect in a card to the Washington Star this evening.

SENATE OFFICERS.

Colonel HENRY WARE, of Massachusetts, was to-day removed from his position in the office of the Secretary of the Senate, and Mr. J. N. FLAGG, of Vermont, was appointed in his place.

ARRIVALS IN THE CITY.

Among the political strangers in town are Lieutenant-Governor DUNN, colored, of Louisiana, and Mr. GOODLOE, United States Marshal of North Carolina.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, March 31.

GOLD IN THE TREASURY.

The following joint resolution, approved March 17, 1864, is still on the statute book:

Resolved, &c., That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to anticipate the payment of interest on the public debt by a period not exceeding one year, from time to time, either with or without rebate of interest upon the coupons, as to him may seem expedient; and he is hereby authorized to dispose of any gold in the Treasury of the United States not necessary for the payment of the interest of the public debt, provided that the obligation to create the sinking fund, according to the act of Feb. 25, 1862, shall not be impaired thereby.

SUSPENSION AND APPOINTMENT.

The Postmaster-General has suspended Special Agent G. W. SUMMERS, and reinstated FOSTER BLODGETT in charge of the Augusta, Ga., Post Office.

NOMINATIONS BY THE PRESIDENT.

The following nominations were sent in to-day.

Emil Holchester, to be Consular Agent at Barmen

George M. Linn, to be Assessor of Internal Revenue SIXH District of Kentnucky; B. F. Wagenseller, to be, Assessor of Internal Revenuue for the Fourteenth District of Pennsyivania; John S. Nixon, to be Collector of Internal Revenue for the Sixth District of Kentucky; Franklin J. Rollins, to be Collector of Internal Revenue for the First District of Maine; William Armstrong, to be Receiver of Public Moneys at Central City, Col.; P. B. Mason, to be Register of the Land Office at Humboldt, K. S.; E. W. Babcock, to be Surveyor General for Kansas; Levi S. Blake, to be Agent of the Blackfoot and neighboring Indians.

The following to be Deputy Postmasters: J. M. Billings, at Santa Clara, Cal.; Thomas E. McLeland, at Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory; Robert Fisher, at Dallas, Texas; Robert N. Mills, at Bryan, Texas; William H. Stellerville, at Humboldt, Tenn.; Thomas McFeely, at Georgetown, S. C.; John J. Speed, at Louisville, Ky.; Henry W. Hogan, at Lancaster, Penn.; John W. Harris, at Lock Haven, Penn.; Enos Hawley, at Muncy, Penn.; William H. Dickey, at Kittanning, Penn.; J. H. Cogswell, at Titusville, Penn.; Joseph Hall, at Acouta, Wis.; Harwood M. Redington, at Tiyria, Ohio; Julius S. Cox, at Norwalk, Ohio; Lewis D. Smith, Ionia, Mich.; R. Mattison, at Newton, N. J.; Stephen W. Rathbun, at Marion, Ohio; George W. Coe, at Arumosa, Iowa; J. E. West, at St. Cloud, Minn.; J. N. Murdock, at Wabashaw, Minn.; E. H. Davidson, at Austin, Minn.; John A. Rathbone, at Mystic Bridge, Conn.; Charles W. Keating, at Shreveport, La.; Franklin A. Munson, at Sandwich, Ill.; John R. Blackwell, at Litchfield, Ill.; Oliver S. Jenks, at Marengo, Ill.; Ed. S. Smith, at Batavia, Ill.

THE CONSUL GENERAL OF HONDURAS.

The President has recognised Mr. E. G. SQUIER, late United States Commissioner in Peru, as Consul-General of the Republic of Honduras resident in New-York.

CONTINGENT EXPENSES.

The Committee to audit and control the contingent expenses of the Senate, of which Senator CRAGIN is Chairman, issued an order to the Sergeant-at-Arms of that body to-day to discharge seventy-four men and boys, besides nineteen additional or temporary messengers, as this reduction can be made without detriment to the business of the Senate.

CONFIRMED BY THE SENATE.

The Senate confirmed, this afternoon, CHAS. S. HAMILTON to be Marshal of the District of Wisconsin, and CHARLES LA FOLLET to be Superintendent of Indian Affairs in Oregon.

A MAN RUN OVER BY A TRAIN.

Last night as the train bound north on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad was approaching Chesterfield Station, about half way between Fredericksburg and Richmond, the engineer discovered a man lying on the track, and before the train could be stopped it had entirely passed over the man's body, cutting it in two. The name of the unfortunate man was HAINES. He had until recently been employed on the road. Near by a half-clothed and intoxicated man was found, who was supposed to be HAINES' companion.

PATENT OFFICE MATTERS.

During the past week 479 applications were received at the Patent Office, 116 caveats filed, and 241 patents ordered to be issued on the 6th of April.

A COLORED FOR JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Among the nominations to be made for Justices of the Peace of this district will be one colored man.

THE TWITCHELL MURDER CASE.

The TWITCHELL case came up before the Supreme Court of the United States this morning, the cause being GEORGE J. TWITCHELL, Jr., vs. The Commissioners of Pennsylvania in error. WM. WHEELER HUBBELL, attorney for the plaintiff in error, moved for leave to file certain papers, and for a writ of error to the Court of Oyer and Terminer and to the General Jail Delivery of the City and County of Philadelphia, and the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania for the Eastern District, on the ground of repugnance of a statute of the State and proceedings to the Constitution of the United States, and to make such order as may be deemed proper, and to hear an argument if desired. Mr. HUBBELL stated that it was a question involving the life of a citizen of the United States. The Court made the following order:

"On motion of Mr. WM. W. HUBBELL of counsel for petitioner, it is ordered by the Court that leave be, and the same is hereby granted him, to file a motion for a writ-of error in this case, with notice to the Attorney-General of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania that said motion will be heard on Friday next, the 2d day of April."

OTHER CASES.

The argument in the causes (six in number) The United States, appellants, vs. Theodore Adams, Albert L. Mowry et al., was concluded to-day by Attorney-General Hoar for the United States. This was his first argument before the Court since his appointment to his present official position.

In the cause of H. T. Hall et al., plaintiffs in error, vs. George Coppell, the argument was commenced by Mr. Ashton, of counsel for plaintiff in error, and continued by Mr. Durant, of counsel for defendant in error, and by Mr. Evarts, of counsel for plaintiff.

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.

Brevet Brigadier-General L. C. Bootes, Major Twenty-sixth Infantry, is ordered to proceed to his home and await orders.

Brevet Major-General Van Vliet, Deputy Quartermaster-General, is ordered to close the business of the Quartermaster's Depot at Baltimore, which will be discontinued 30th April, 1869.

The Quartermaster's Depot at Boston, Mass., will be discontinued the same date.

Brevet Brigadier-General R. E. Clary, retired, is relieved from duty at Boston, and ordered to proceed to his home.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.

Commodore S. F. Emmons has been detached from duty as President, and Captains Pierce, Crosby and J. G. Corbin, and Surgeons George Maulsby and Thomas Dillard, from duty as members of the Examining and Retiring Board, and placed on waiting orders. Captain Wm. Rowlan has been ordered to the naval rendezvous at Philadelphia; Lieutenant-Commander E. O. Walker to the Navy-yard at New-York; Lieutenant-Commander John McFarland ordered to the naval rendezvous at Philadelphia; Surgeon Charles Everfield detached from the Examining Board, and ordered to the Philadelphia rendezvous.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

FIRST SESSION.

SENATE.....WASHINGTON, March 31.

The Vice-President laid before the Senate the House concurrent resolution to adjourn on the 6th proximo.

Mr. SUMNER moved to lay it on the table.

Mr. HOWE and other Senators opposed the motion, and it was lost.

Mr. FESSENDEN, as Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, said that in his opinion it would be impossible to finish by that time the business pending before the Senate; that the Senate ought not to fix a day for adjournment until it should at least dispose of the Indian Appropriation bill.

Mr. SUMNER agreed with the Senator from Maine that the Senate ought not to concur in this resolution; but the Indian Appropriation bill was not the only, or even the most important, matter requiring the attention of Congress. There was the whole subject of Georgia, involving the question of the admission of representatives and the question as to what shall be done to secure a proper reconstruction of that State. This was the most important subject before Congress, and Senators ought not even to talk of going home until the case of Georgia, in all its branches, should have been fully considered and settled. The settlement of the case of Georgia was important, not only to the people of that State, but also as an example for the other States of Mississippi, Texas and Virginia. Another very important matter demanding attention and action at this session, was the revision of the Naturalization laws, so as to prevent frauds in naturalization.

Mr. HOWE was unable to see why it was wrong to talk about adjournment. It was a peculiarity of the Senator from Massachusetts that the longer he stayed here the more he found to be done. [Laughter.] He (Mr. HOWE) would be willing to remain in session a while longer for the purpose of settling the Georgia case, if he could see any prospect of making such settlement, but he had been here ever since 1862 trying to reconstruct Georgia and the other Southern States, and yet he believed they were no nearer to reconstruction than ever. If Congress could reconstruct a State it had had time enough to do it; but to reconstruct successfully, in addition to Congress and time, one thing more was needed—good sense.

Mr. SUMNER asked what the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. HOWE) proposed to do with the pending Executive business?

Mr. HOWE did not believe there was enough of such business to occupy an evening session, but thought that, as a matter of course, the Senate would remain in session long enough to dispose of all business of that kind that might come before it.

Mr. ANTHONY said that, so far as he could recollect, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. SUMNER) had never voted for an adjournment, and he (Mr. ANTHONY) thought there was no good reason why Congress should not adjourn at the time fixed in the House resolution.

Mr. SUMNER asked what the Senator from Rhode Island proposed to do with Georgia.

Mr. ANTHONY—Well, that is a question that has troubled me a good deal, and I have pretty much come to the conclusion to let Georgia take care of herself.

Mr. SUMNER—Then the Senator proposes to furnish no protection or security to the Union men of that State?

Mr. ANTHONY replied that a bill for Georgia could be passed in a very short time—whenever the Senator having charge of it would go to a quorum of the Senate and ask them to stand by it.

Mr. SUMNER—What does my excellent friend say to Virginia?

Mr. ANTHONY—I don't think it is necessary to do anything for Virginia at this session.

Mr. SUMNER—Or Texas?

Mr. ANTHONY—I suppose Texas will stand pretty nearly as she has done for the last few years. Those States do not seem willing to come in, and I do not think we can help it.

Mr. CONKLING suggested that the Senator from Rhode Island, in answering the gentleman from Massachusetts on this subject, should bear in mind that the House Committee on Reconstruction, which had for a long time been investigating and considering the whole subject, and which, therefore, might be presumed to know whether it required any further legislation at this session, had implicitly expressed the opinion that it did not, by twice acquiescing in the proposition to adjourn at an early day.

Mr. SUMNER—I understand then that my friend from Rhode Island proposes to abandon those States?

Mr. ANTHONY—Only so far as I propose to abandon at the same time Massachusetts, Rhode Island and the other States.

Mr. SUMNER—Ah! But the Senator knows they are in a situation different from Rhode Island and Massachusetts. They are in a situation to require Congressional protection.

Mr. WARNER was unwilling to go home or to have Congress adjourn without doing something to settle definitely the status of the States now excluded from representation. If they were to be admitted upon the terms already offered, they should be told so, and if new conditions were to be imposed, it was the duty of Congress, in justice to the people of those States, to let them know what was required of them.

Mr. HAMLIN moved to amend the resolution so as to fix upon Saturday, April 10, as the day of adjournment.

Mr. FESSENDEN said he was not at all troubled by the case of Georgia, although he had certain definite opinions on that subject, which, at the proper time, he would express. He was opposed, however, for other reasons, to fixing at this time a day for adjournment, but if it must be done, he preferred the day suggested by his colleague to that fixed by the House.

Mr. CONKLING was willing to vote for the amendment of the Senator from Maine, (Mr. HAMLIN,) but would prefer to adjourn on the day named in the resolution as it had come from the House, though he would be very reluctant to bring the session to an end until Congress should have done all that in his judgment was necessary. The last three years had been filled with sessions of Congress, not merely regular sessions, but extraordinary sessions brought about by the war and emblematic of it, and he believed that the people were thoroughly tired of the extraordinary proceedings, the justifications for which were to be found only in the war, and anxious to resume the old modes and customs of their fathers.

Mr. THAYER, on the contrary, believed that the people approved of all the sessions of Congress during the past three years. It was unjust to excluded States to adjourn now, and in the name of the loyal people of Georgia he demanded that Congress should continue in session and provide for their protection.

Mr. ROBERTSON, as a Southern man, was not willing to go home without doing something for the loyal people of the Southern States, and he moved to amend the resolution so as to fix the 15th of April as the day of adjournment.

THE INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

At the expiration of the morning hour the resolution went over, and the Indian Appropriation bill came up as unfinished business. Several amendments reported from the Committee on Appropriations were agreed to.

At 3:45 the bill was informally laid aside.

THE TENURE-OF-OFFICE ACT.

Mr. TRUMBULL, from the Committee of Conference on the bill to repeal the Tenure-of-Office act, made the report which will be found in the proceedings of the House. He explained the bill as agreed upon by the Committee. The bill, as it had passed the Senate, required a direct vote of the Senate, refusing to confirm the nomination of a new appointee, in order to reinstate the former officer; and the change made by the Conference Committee simply provided that, when an officer was suspended by the President, he should be reinstated at the end of the next session of the Senate, unless the nomination of his successor had been confirmed in the meantime.

Mr. TRUMBULL would not vote for the report of the Committee, because, according to his understanding, it would prevent the President from removing any member of his Cabinet in a recess no matter how obnoxious that member should have become. He supposed the dominant party would pass the bill in the form that best suited them, but it was at least right that the minority should be allowed to know what they were voting for, and, therefore, he moved that the bill as it had passed the Senate before, and the report of the Committee of Conference be laid on the table and ordered to be printed. Lost—yeas 8, nays 45.

The report of the Committee was then agreed to—yeas 45, nays 8.

The nays were as follows: Messrs. Bayard, Casserly, Davis, McCreery, Sprague, Stockton, Thurman and Vickers.

A PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. YATES rose to a question of privilege. He had seen a statement in some of the papers of his State that, in the previous debate on the bill to repeal the Tenure-of-Office act, when Senator EDMUNDS quoted an opinion of his (Mr. YATES) expressed on the impeachment trial, he dissented from it. The statement was incorrect. On the contrary, he had reaffirmed the opinion, and stated that all he said on that subject on the impeachment trial, was good law.

The Senate, at 4:15 o'clock went into Executive Session and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. LAFLIN presented a petition of HORACE L. EMERY for the extension of the patent for an improvement on the endless-chain horse power.

A NEW RULE.

Mr. FERRY, from the Committee on Rules, reported a new rule requiring the Hall to be cleared of persons not entitled to the privileges of the floor ten minutes before the hour of meeting. Adopted.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. POLAND introduced a bill to extend the provisions of the act of the 29th of August, 1842, to provide further remedial justice on the United States Courts. Referred to the Committee on the Revision of the Laws.

Mr. SHAFER, of Idaho, introduced a bill to provide a library for Idaho Territory. Referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WOODWARD introduced a bill to test the constitutionality of the questionable acts of Congress. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. STRICKLAND introduced a bill extending the time for the completion of the Portage Lake and Lake Superior Ship Canal. Referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. CAKE introduced a bill to incorporate the Government Anthracite Railroad Company. Referred to the Committee on Roads and Canals.

Mr. FITCH introduced a bill for holding a term of the United States Court in Nevada. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. WITCHER introduced bills to establish a port of entry and provide for the construction of a Custom-house at Charlestown, West Virginia. Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. BINGHAM introduced a bill extending to corporations the privileges and immunities guaranteed by the Constitution to the citizens of the respective States. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

PERSONAL STATEMENT.

Mr. CAKE stated that he was paired off on the Tenure-of-office bill, otherwise he should have voted yesterday against concurring in the Senate amendment.

AN AMENDMENT TO THE HOMESTEAD LAWS.

Mr. FERRY offered an amendment directing the Committee on Public Lands to inquire into the expediency of amending the Homestead law, so as to count service in the army as a part of the five years' occupation required of settlers. Adopted.

SECRET SALES OF GOLD AND BONDS.

Mr. DAVIS introduced a bill to prohibit secret sales or purchases of gold or bonds on account of the United States. Referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

INTEREST ON THE PUBLIC DEBT.

Mr. SCHENCK, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported back the Senate bill to authorize the prepayment of the interest on the public debt, and asked that the committee be discharged from the further consideration of it.

Mr. GARFIELD inquired whether there was now a law making the same provision? He said he had had that impression until the Senate passed this bill.

Mr. SCHENCK said the gentleman was right in his impression. There was a joint resolution for the same purpose passed in 1864.

Mr. GARFIELD inquired how much gold could be used for anticipating interest?

Mr. SCHENCK said it was impossible to state the amount, but mentioned an accumulation of $80,000,000 in gold in the Treasury, besides the daily receipts from Customs. He had no doubt that profitable use could be made of a portion of such gold in the way proposed.

The Committee was discharged from further consideration of the bill.

THE BANGOR CUSTOM-HOUSE.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill authorizing an appropriation of $25,000, made for the Bangor, Me., Custom-house for the next fiscal year, to be expended during the present fiscal year. He explained that the work could be completed next May, and referred the House to the assurance given at the last session by the member from that district, (Mr. PETERS,) that no further appropriation would be asked for the purpose. Passed.

ELECTION IN TEXAS.

Mr. WHITTEMORE introduced a joint resolution postponing the election in Texas. Referred to the Committee on Reconstruction.

SIERRA AND MENDOCINO COUNTIES, CAL.

Mr. JOHNSON introduced, explained and had passed by the House a bill transferring the County of Sierra, Cal., from the Sacramento Land District to the Marysville Land District, and the County of Mendocino from the Humboldt Land District to the San Francisco Land District.

DISTRICT TAX.

Mr. JULIAN offered a resolution instructing the Committee of Ways and Means to inquire into the expediency of reviving and enforcing the direct tax in the States lately in rebellion. Adopted.

THE WASHINGTON AQUEDUCT.

Mr. WASHBURN, of Wisconsin, offered a resolution instructing the Committee on the District of Columbia to inquire into the condition of the Washington Aqueduct, and the causes of the insufficient quantity and bad quality of the water supplied; also, as to contracts for work and payments for property taken, &c., and to send for persons and papers. Adopted.

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE.

Mr. CLEVELAND offered a resolution reciting the purpose of the New-York American Institute to hold an international exhibition of the industry of all nations in New-York in 1870, and instructing the Committee on Manufactures to inquire as to the propriety of rendering Government aid to such undertakings. Adopted.

PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT FOR MISSISSIPPI.

The House then, at 1 o'clock, proceeded to the consideration of the bill reported from the Reconstruction Committee, for the organization of a Provisional Government for Mississippi.

Mr. FARNSWORTH, a member of the Reconstruction Committee, offered a substitute for the bill, proposing a resubmission to the people of Mississippi of the Constitution already framed, with separate votes on some of its objectionable features. He argued against the bill reported from the Committee, which proposes to reassemble the Convention, and to authorize it to appoint a Provisional Governor, with power on his part to fill all the other State offices. That Convention, he said, was not popular with the best classes of Union people in Mississippi; to revive it would be to throw in a fresh apple of discord, and to prolong, instead of to quiet, the disorders reigning there.

Mr. WARD inquired whether the gentleman had any charge to make against the members of that Convention.

Mr. FARNSWORTH declined to discuss the personnel of the Convention, but remarked that most of the members were themselves candidates for office, and that it was suspected by the Union men that the whole game was got up in the interest of those candidates. The proposition that those candidates should elect a Provisional Governor who would have the appointment of all State officers was exceedingly distasteful to the people. With General GRANT as President of the United States, and with a good officer in charge of that military district, who was not mixed up with any of those cliques or cabals, was it not better to leave the Government of Mississippi as it now is until it should be properly erected into a State? Why impose a new discord—a new strife—a new trouble on the people? Why prolong the contest? Were gentlemen afraid that the President would not properly instruct his military commanders there? Were they afraid that the military of the country would, under General GRANT, be in hostility to the interests of the Union and the loyal people of Mississippi? He trusted not. He (Mr. FARNSWORTH) had taken up the cudgel twenty-five years ago in defence of the black man, while some of the gentlemen were acting with the party that was in conspiracy with the slaveholders to fasten the manacles more closely upon the black man. He had fought it out on that line until the black man had procured not only his freedom, but the right to vote and hold office. He was just as willing now to take up the cudgel in defence of the white man. The time for talking about a sweeping punishment of every man engaged in the late rebellion was past; the moral effect of anything of the sort was gone. While he would steadfastly oppose removing disqualifications from the leaders of the rebellion, he was willing to shake hands with every man who was in favor of extending the right of suffrage to every citizen of the United States not disqualified by crime, and crime he (Mr. F.) said, until that was done there would be nothing but discord and strife and confusion in those States. He would, therefore, move to postpone the whole subject until next session.

Mr. SCHENCK said he would vote for the postponement of the whole subject till the next session of Congress. If it were not postponed, he would be willing to have the Constitution of Mississippi again submitted to the people either in whole or in part. If that could not be done, then he would vote against the bill before the House. It seemed to him that that bill involved a great defeat, namely, the governing a State by a convention—the worst form of a government—a hydra-headed government. He preferred very much that simpler and more effective government—government by the military arm, until the people of Mississippi were ready to come in under the Reconstruction acts.

THE TENURE-OF-OFFICE ACT.

The discussion was interrupted at 2 o'clock, when Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, rose and made the report from the Conference Committee on the Tenure-of-Office bill. The bill as proposed to be adopted, repeals the first and second sections of the original Tenure-of-Office act of the 2d of March, 1867. The first section of the Senate amendment is left untouched, and the second section, amended so as to read as follows:

That during any recess of the Senate the President is hereby empowered in his discretion to suspend any civil officer, appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, except Judges of the United States Courts, until the end of the next session of the Senate, and to designate some suitable person, subject to be removed in his discretion, by the designation of another to perform the duties of such suspended officer in the meantime, and such person so designated shall take the oaths and give the bonds required by law to be taken and given by the suspended officer, and shall during the time he shall perform the duties be entitled to the salary and emoluments of such officer, no part of which shall belong to the officer suspended; and it shall be the duty of the President, within thirty days after the commencement of every session of the Senate, except for any office which in his opinion ought to be filled, to nominate persons to fill all vacancies in offices which exist prior to the meeting of the Senate, whether temporarily filled or not, and so in the place of all officers suspended; and if the Senate during such session shall refuse to advise and consent to an appointment in the place of any suspended officer, then, and not otherwise, the President shall nominate another person as soon as practicable to said session of the Senate for said office.

Mr. BINGHAM, one of the Conference Committee, made an explanation of the report, and said it would be acceptable to the Republican Party and to the country.

Mr. DAVIS suggested that the whole thing was yielded to the Senate in leaving the first section of its amendment untouched, which forbids the removal of officers without the advice and consent of the Senate.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, Chairman of the Conference Committee, also made an explanation of the report, which struck out, he said, everything that gave to the Senate the power to reinstate the suspended officer. He was bound to say that he thought the action on the removal and reinstatement of officers repealed the Tenure-of-Office act, as though it had never been passed. He did not think it altered the power of the President from what he had under the Constitution.

Mr. LOGAN suggested whether the difference between the repeal of the Tenure-of-Office bill and the report of the Conference Committee, was not the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee.

Mr. BUTLER said he would not put it so strong. He thought the difference was right the other way; it was the difference between tweedledee and tweedledum. [Laughter.]

Mr. BANKS stated what he understood to be the effect of the report. By the first section, if the President made a removal of an officer calling it a removal, and if the Senate refused to confirm the nomination of the person designated to fill the office, then the removed officer was restored.

Mr. BUTLER—No, Sir.

Mr. BANKS—But if the President remove an officer, and calls it a suspension, and if the Senate refuse to confirm the nomination made in the place of that officer, then the suspended officer is not restored; and if the Senate fail to confirm a nomination at the end of the session, the President can make another nomination during the recess.

Mr. BUTLER—He has the same power that he now has under the Constitution.

Mr. BANKS—And "suspension" is a synonym for "removal."

Mr. BUTLER—Yes.

Mr. NOELL said he suggested the other day that the transfer of his allegiance to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. BUTLER) was only temporary. It had so turned out; he would have to cease following his lead. He regarded the conference report as a hermaphrodite measure, of which neither the sense nor the color could be discerned. It was an entire failure. Instead of the gentleman's allies, he felt that he was out in the cold. He must announce a dissolution of the partnership in the matter. The Democrats could no longer safely follow the lead of the gentleman from Massachusetts. It was suggested to him that the partnership left no assets. He believed that that was entirely true. [Laughter.] He could not vote for this measure. It left the whole thing in a muddle, to be construed in one way when the President was in favor with the party in power, and to be construed in a different way when he was not in favor.

Mr. WOOD said that under the construction which he put on the report the Senate yielded none of its former position on the question. The Senate would virtually and practically hold the power to coerce the President in the appointment of such officers in the place of suspended officers as the Senate might dictate. The Tenure-of-Office act was in itself all wrong; it could not be amended, and should be repealed. He was astonished that the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. BUTLER) should have so completely changed his attitude. He hoped the House would not agree to the report.

Mr. POLAND hoped that none of his Republican friends would be deceived by the notice of dissolution of partnership given on behalf of the Democratic side of the House. He opposed the report as depriving the Senate of its power to check the President in the matter of appointments.

Mr. DAWES desired to vote understandingly, and therefore suggested that the matter should go over till to-morrow, in order that the report might be printed.

Mr. BUTLER declined to yield for that motion.

Mr. HOAR opposed the report as putting it in the power of the Senate to say to the President: "You shall take your choice. Either take back that man whom you have publicly declared unfit to hold the office, or you shall not have the office filled at all."

Mr. LOGAN preferred the repeal of the Tenure-of-Office bill, but regarded the report as amounting to the same thing in a rather roundabout way, and therefore he would vote for it.

Mr. BUTLER moved the previous question on the report.

Mr. DAVIS hoped the previous question would not be seconded.

The previous question was seconded by a vote of 98 to 51, and the report was agreed to by a vote of yeas 108 to nays 67, as follows:

SING SING.

The Death of the Sing Sing Convict—Verdict of the Coroner's Jury.

From Our Own Reporter.

SING SING, Wednesday, March 31, 1869.

Coroner McENTEE to-day held an inquest on the body of MONTAGUE DEAN, a convict, who died recently, and whose body was exhumed and subjected to a post-mortem examination in consequence of the report circulated that he had died from the effects of ill-treatment Several witnesses were examined, who testified that in consequence of bad conduct and threatening a keeper while at work he had been subjected to a "shower bath" sometime previous to his death. The following testimony of Dr. COLLINS is the substance of the case:

Dr. Isaac G. Collins recalled: I reside in Sing Sing, and am the regularly appointed physician of the prison. I corroborate all of Dr. Helm's testimony relative to the post-mortem examination of the body; the convict Montague Dean had been under my treatment ever since I was connected with the prison; I have treated him for secondary syphilis; he had been admitted to the hospital during my administration three separate times and discharged, and at each time of admission he was suffering from vomiting, cramps in the bowels and spasmodic laborious breathing; at each admission the pain and suffering were more severe than at previous admission, but readily yielding to remedies, and only lasting a few hours; I had supposed the vomiting, cramps, &c., were simply owing to internal syphilitic ulcerations, which, however, the post-mortem showed not to be the case, and I am unable to form an opinion as to the cause of either of the attacks at each admission; he was admitted to the hospital on the morning of the day before his death, suffering with the same symptoms as on previous admissions, which readily yielded to treatment as before; he ate three hearty meals the day before his death, and expressed himself to me at night, as I left the prison, as feeling well and comfortable; I was told by the nurses and nightguards in the hospital that he slept well and uninterruptedly during the night; at five o'clock the next morning he was taken with a choking sensation, and appeared to act like a person suffocating; so the nurses informed me; he became immediately unconscious, and remained so till the time of his death, which occurred at eleven A. M.; he died on the 25th of March, after having been admitted to the hospital at an early hour on the day previous, having ate a hearty breakfast in the mess-room; his sickness was real; am unable to form any opinion as to the cause of his death; I am acquainted with the process of showering convicts; I only know by hearsay that Dean was showered previous to his death; he died in forty-eight hours after being showered; the showering was performed on the day previous to his admission to the hospital; the showering was not the cause of the admission of Dean to the hospital; there is no established rule to be observed in showering convicts, other than punishing them till they submit; a case might arise where the convict would not submit; then the showering might go beyond a safe point; I never saw such a case; the showering process does not transpire once a day; I have always considered it my duty to be present when a convict is showered, if I am notified; I am not notified by the keeper to inform me; I do not consider it was dangerous to shower Dean; if the effects of a showering are not immediate, it would not produce death suddenly for a time afterward; there are diseases which cause death which may not be revealed upon a post-mortem examination; Dean came from the shop to the hospital, and not from a dark cell; I know Buckingham, the keeper who showered Dean; I was in the prison on the day it occurred; no one notified me that Dean was to be showered; I have no doubt it was some one's duty to do so; an old and experienced keeper could shower a convict with safety without the presence of a physician; on the whole, however, a physician should always be present when a convict is showered; I do not think the showering of Dean had anything to do with the cause of his death; the keeper, Buckingham, is said to be a good physician.

The jury rendered the following verdict:

"We find that the convict, MONTAGUE DEAN, came to his death after an illness in the prison hospital of some five hours, from causes unknown to the jury; and further, we find no evidence to show that any prison rules or practice has been violated."

The Case of Real.

JOHN REAL, who is under sentence of death for the murder of Officer SMEDICK, manifests but little emotion in view of his impending fate. Probably this may be accounted for in part by the strong hope that there will be a review of his case, involving a stay of proceedings and a possible escape from the death penalty. His friends, as is well known, have been laboring strenuously to effect this. The decision of Judge SUTHERLAND in regard to it was expected yesterday, but it is now announced that it will be rendered this morning at 10:30 o'clock. The friends of the accused yesterday expressed great confidence that it would be favorable to him.

REAL was visited yesterday at the Tombs by his spiritual advisers, Father DURANQUET, of the Church of St. Francis Xavier, in Sixteenth-street, and Father DULCIE, of the Second-avenue Church of the Nativity. He was taken to the little chapel of the prison, where mass was celebrated at 7 A. M. This morning these services will be repeated. REAL unites in them, seemingly, with great fervor. He was visited yesterday, also, by several Sisters of Mercy, who spent some time with him in his cell.

No preparations have yet been made for the execution, which is to take place to morrow unless a stay of proceedings is granted. After the decision of Judge SUTHERLAND is made known this morning, in case it is unfavorable to the condemned man, the gallows will be immediately erected in the southwest quadrangle of the Tombs prison-yard, just in front of what is known as the female office. It will take five or six hours to make the necessary preparations for the hanging. REAL appears to be cheerful in his confinement. He eats and sleeps well, and has not lost flesh since he was incarcerated.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—MARCH 31.

Before Judge Barnard.

THE UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD—ORDERS AND COUNTER-ORDERS.

James Fisk, Jr., vs. the Union Pacific Railroad, the Credit Mobilier of America, et al.—Immediately after the opening of the Court, Judge BARNARD asked Receiver Tweed if those books and papers were in Court. Mr. Receiver Tweed said, if the Court please, I am writing a report to-day. The report having been presented to the Court, the latter said:

The receiver reports that last night he was served with a stay of proceedings. I don't understand how my proceedings can be stayed by a party whom a witness is being examined before me. It is, undoubtedly, an interference with the administration of justice. There must be some mistake. I have never been interfered with in this way before. Soon, perhaps, I shall be served with an injunction. After some further remarks of a like character, Judge BARNARD said: There must be an order drawn up and served, to show cause why this order staying my proceedings, served last night on the receiver, shall not be vacated. Let it be made returnable at 12 M. to-day.

The Judge then signed the order, which was served on the other side.

At 12 o'clock Mr. Field read the order to show cause and the two orders of Judge Rosecrans, of the Supreme Court of this State, which he asked to have vacated and set aside.

Mr. Tracy objected; such practice was without precedent.

Judge BARNARD asked Mr. Tracy if, in his judgment, another Judge of this Court had a right to stay him (BARD) while conducting the examination of a witness.

Mr. Tracy—Could not your Honor stay the proceedings before a referee in a suit pending in your Court? But a very few days ago you announced from the Bench that you had taken upon yourself the duties of a referee; you said you would assume the functions of Mr. Redfield, and you proceeded to do so by directing Mr. Durant to go upon the stand and submit to an examination.

Judge BARNARD said the referee was but an officer of the Court, and was subject to its control. If the Court or Judge thereof sees fit to assume the duties of a referee, that is another thing. Here there were two orders which he, as the Special Term Court, was asked to vacate. One is a Chambers order, the other a Special Term order.

Mr. Tracy asked if an order staying proceedings must necessarily be a Special Term order.

Judge Barnard—Any order which directs a clerk to "enter" is a Special Term order.

Mr. Tracy then read the orders staying proceedings and notices of appeal.

Mr. E. W. Stoughton, one of the counsel for Mr. Fisk, proceeded to state what the orders in question are. The first is an appeal from an order made by Judge BARNARD on the 24th inst., setting aside the order of Judge Rosecrans made on the 27th; the second is an appeal (with stay of proceedings) from the order of Judge BARNARD dated March 30, whereby the receivership was continued.

Mr. Tracy gave his version of the facts, which did not differ materially from the statement of Mr. Stoughton. They had appealed to the General Term of this Court from the order which were made by Judge BARNARD. The first was an appeal from Judge BARNARD'S order of Monday last, in which the latter Judge vacated the order of Judge Rosecrans sending the case to the United States Court. The second was an appeal from Judge BARNARD'S order of the 30th continuing the receivership. The defendants had given ample security in both instances. To set aside these stay of proceedings now would be to take away the rights of the Union Pacific Road. The security was satisfactory to Judge Rosecrans, and they could cover these proceedings all over with security the most ample. The law gave the defendants the remedy they had chosen, and this Court could not deprive them of it by any order it could possibly make. He meant no offence to the presiding Judge, and he spoke respectfully, but in this Court, as in all others where they were called upon as plaintiffs or defendants, his clients, the Railroad Company of the Pacific, would stand upon their rights.

Mr. Stoughton, in reply, said the Court by this time must understand the nature of the orders which they asked to have set aside. The order of Judge Rosecrans stays all proceedings until the next General Term and the further order of the Court. In the second case Judge BARNARD'S order continuing the receivership was stayed until the hearing and decision of the General Term. It was a most unheard of thing that a Judge (Rosecrans) can transfer a case pending in this Court to the United States Court ex parte, after argument long and able had been made before his Honor and the motion denied after much deliberation. Counsel contended that no order to transfer is necessary when a proper case is made for it. By virtue of the statute of 1789, and subsequent ones, an action is transferred from the State to the Federal Court. But those statutes contemplated a notice to the opposite party and an argument. No such thing as an ex parte proceeding was ever contemplated, such as has been attempted in this case. To put it in the mildest terms, it was an inconsiderate order, that of Judge Rosecrans. It was an order, which, after having considered all the facts so thoroughly, your Honor did right in vacating. Counsel discussed the other order continuing the receivership, &c., and concluded by saying he thought it was an unjust and illegal order, made as it was by a Judge who had recently here from another district, especially after Judge Barnard had heard the arguments pro and con, at length, and after deliberation refused to remove the action to the United States Court.

Mr. Tracy replied. He said Judge Sutherland gave an order to show cause why the action should not be transferred to the United States Court on the same day that Judge Rosecrans granted the peremptory order. The order of Judge Sutherland is returnable on Monday next. The law says a party may appeal upon complying with certain conditions. Those conditions defendants had complied with. They had given ample security. He then asked the Court to see how little it was that they asked to be saved from the general maelstrom in which it was proposed to swallow them this morning. The order provided for the course they had taken. They had followed the law strictly, and taken their appeals regularly. It was a question whether one Judge in New-York should control, or whether three should govern as provided by law. He had no fears as to the result.

Both Mr. Stoughton and Mr. Field here interposed an objection that there was no Supreme Court General Term, at which these appeals could be heard, before next October; meantime the interests involved in this litigation might, and would doubtless, suffer very severely.

Mr. Tracy thought that under such circumstances the Court would grant an order that the appeals be heard at General Term, on short notice, as there is to be a term of that Court commencing the first Monday of April.

Mr. Field wished to know the amount of security which had been given on appeal.

Mr. Tracy did not recollect the amount in which the sureties justified; but the security was ample; it was $500 for costs, and ten times what the costs would be. But they were not then on the bail bonds. Those were amply satisfactory to Judge Rosecrans, Suppose, said Mr. Tracy, we had a Judge who should say, "I will set aside the order of any Justice of the Supreme Court in the State who does not agree with me?" What a terrible state of things this would be in this City and State. Simply a play of battledore and shuttlecock; nothing more, nothing less. We have over thirty Judges of the Supreme Court in this State. In this City we have hardly ever less than seven or eight Judges. Why should these Judges array themselves the one against others? There is no good reason. If the people are to respect law and those who administer it, these collisions among Judges should be guarded against with the most zealous care.

Judge BARNARD, in delivering his decision, said that without passing upon the power which the Judge of another district has to grant orders, such as have been granted in this instance, he thought the practice which had been growing so rapidly of late, of Judges from other districts interfering with actions pending in this district was improper, and to say the least, indelicate on the part of those who interfere. He would not vacate Judge Rosecrans' orders without giving counsel an opportunity to be heard, as he might do legally. But, as a matter of courtesy, he had declined. He had granted an order to show cause, and such cause as the defendants had they had shown. As a matter of self-respect, this Court must treat these orders as void, and he saw no other way but to vacate them. Orders would be entered accordingly.

Thereupon Mr. Dudley Field read two orders, already prepared, vacating the two orders of Judge Rosecrans. They were passed up to Judge BARNARD, who signed both.

Mr. Stoughton then asked the direction of the Court as to the production of the books from the safe.

Judge BARNARD said he would make an order that the books and papers from the Company's safe be produced in Court on Thursday next.

Mr. Stoughton remarked that the other side had better understand now that until this Court at Special or General Term decide that this action is not in this Court but elsewhere, the case will go on here.

Mr. Tracy begged leave to say that the defendants understood that the case is pending in the Circuit Court of the United States, and that no power of this Court can put it back where it was commenced.

Mr. Stoughton—Then you abandon your appeal?

Mr. Tracy—No; but if we find ourselves in this Court, which is without jurisdiction, our defending ourselves here will not confer jurisdiction.

Judge BARNARD said they were not trying the case, but were trying to get the contents of the safe.

Mr. Tracy—The safe, which they said contained only an old almanac and $1 50, has resisted well so far. We shall see what it will do in the future.

The Court then adjourned.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS—MARCH 31.

By Judge Cardozo.

Mary E. Sniffen vs. Edward W. Sniffen; report filed, order confirming report and judgment of divorce granted.

National Citizens' Banks vs. S. N. Griswold; motion granted on payment of $10 costs.

John G. Noack vs. Pauline Nock; pleadings must be submitted.

By Judge Barnard.

Wetmore vs. Sandford; amendments allowed.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM—MARCH 31.

By Judge Brady.

Moses vs. Latorriè; motion to discharge defendant from custody denied, with leave to renew on payment of $20 costs.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Judge Bedford.

SENTENCE OF GEORGE KING, THE BOND THIEF.

This man, George King, a gentlemanly looking young fellow, is the one who stole $200,000 in bonds from Cambreleng & Pine. He pleaded guilty and restored all the bonds except $40,000. It appears that he has during five years assumed five different names, and robbed a number of people of sums varying from $2,000 upward, the $200,000 enterprise being his chef d'œuvre. Judge BEDFORD inflicted the utmost penalty of the law, five years in the State Prison. It is said that $10,000 more will be recovered, but that the cool rascal refuses to return the remaining $30,000, openly averring that he will retain it to compensate himself for the five years in the State Prison.

BURGLARY.

The People vs. James Wilson, indicted for burglary. The prisoner pleaded guilty and was sentenced to State Prison for four years.

John Eagan was tried for burglary. The prisoner appeared to be nearly seventy years old.

Barnard Lewis, of No. 116 Baxter-street, stated that on the 24th of March, at 1 A. M., he was awakened by his dog's barking: he opened the door leading from his bedroom to his store, and saw the prisoner in the store; the prisoner attempted to run away; a door leading from the store to the yard was open.

The witness has twice been arrested for receiving stolen goods, and was discharged honorably both times. The store contained new and second-hand clothing.

Officer Cambell arrested the prisoner in the store, and found on him two skeleton keys, a knife-saw and a candle. The prisoner told the witness that he walked into the door.

The jury retired, and on returning brought in a verdict of "not guilty."

GRAND LARCENY.

Charles Crager (colored) was tried for grand larceny.

James Goodchild (colored) stated that on the 12th of March he disembarked from the ship Charger and was paid off; that on the 16th of March he went to bed at a bed-house, leaving $80 and a watch in his pockets; when he woke up in the morning the doors were open and the money and watch were missing. The witness saw the prisoner at the Station-house, saw him searched and saw a pawn ticket taken from him. The witness went with an officer to the pawnbroker's, presented the ticket and the stolen watch was produced.

Other witnesses corroborated Goodchild's story.

Mr. Spencer, counsel for the defence, claimed that the ticket was the only production of the watch on the presentation of the ticket was no legal evidence that the ticket was issued to represent the watch.

Judge BEDFORD charged the jury that the evidence was sufficient to identify the watch if the witnesses told the truth. Mr. Spencer took an exception.

The jury returned a verdict of "guilty."

Mr. Spencer argued for a new trial on the grounds, first, that a part of the conversation at the pawnbroker's was not admissible, because the prisoner was not present, therefore the witnesses who said that Goodchild identified the watch could have judged only from pantomime; secondly, that as Barnet's duplicate ticket, his register, and his own knowledge were better evidence than that offered, therefore that offered was secondary and inadmissible.

Judge BEDFORD, in reply, reiterated his charge to the jury, and then sentenced the prisoner to State Prison for four years.

District-Attorney Garvin addressed the Court, stating that he had watched the proceedings of the Court during the term with great pleasure, although a press of other business has prevented his coming in to conduct the prosecution of cases himself. He had been delighted by the tact in which the jurors had discharged their duty, by their punctuality in attendance, by the careful attention they had given to cases brought before them, and by the promptness of their decisions. He had been pleased by the spirit shown by his assistants, Mr. Hutchings and Mr. Tweed, in not endeavoring to obtain convictions when they believed the prisoners to be innocent. He complimented the Judge on his discretion and sagacity. The Court, he said, has disposed of more than one hundred cases during the month. There never was a time when so so few men were confined in the Tombs waiting trial. He trusted that before the vacation the Court would reach the current cases and dispose of them as rapidly as they appeared. He stated that the number of gross crimes had greatly diminished for several days back. In conclusion he moved that the Court be adjourned for the term.

Mr. Charles Spencer asked leave to introduce a motion, before the adjournment, that Morris Leonard be discharged. Leonard is the man indicted for breaking Benedict's window and stealing jewelry. The motion was made on the ground that the prisoner had already been confined through two terms of the Court without trial. The District-Attorney objected and the motion was denied.

The Court was then adjourned for the term.

POLICE COURTS.

The Tombs—Dowling, Justice.

PICKPOCKETS.

Geo. Davis and Michael Goodman were arrested yesterday, by Detective Nolan, of the Sixth Ward, on suspicion of having assaulted an unknown lady with an intent to steal. The attempt was made in the presence of the officer, as he stood in Bayard-street, and he arrested them before they obtained any plunder. In the possession of the prisoners were found several wallets, and other articles, which showed that they had been actively at work. All of this property is now to be seen at the Franklin-street Police Station, on application to Captain Jourdan. The prisoners were held for trial by the Magistrate.

Jefferson Market—Dodge, Justice.

DISHONEST SERVANT.

Jules J. Stouvenel, No. 132 West Fifteenth-street, made a complaint that yesterday Annie Barlow, employed in the house as a servant, took silverware valued at $30, which she placed in a basket and left in an outside area-way. She was committed on a charge of grand larceny for trial at the General Sessions.

A COMPLAINANT MISSING.

Officers Mangan and Davis, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, yesterday brought before the Magistrate Rose Bradley and Mary Taylor, who were charged with having stopped one James Gilmore in the street and robbed him of $200. The complainant had been in Court during the morning, but when he was called to make his complaint it was discovered that he had left the Court-room. It was then suggested that the prisoners must be discharged, but the Magistrate remanded them to the Station-house, and directed the officers to institute a search for the missing complainant.

Essex Market—Shandley, Justice.

A FALSE SECURITY.

Theresa Meson, No. 248 Fourth-street, Jersey City, made a complaint stating that on the 4th of September last she loaned Nanette Spery $400, receiving as security two certificates for forty shares each of the stock of the Ladies' Consolidated Gold and Silver Mining Company of San Francisco, Cal., which Nanette represented to be worth $2,000. On the 4th of October ensuing $50 of the loan was repaid, and a due-bill given for the remainder of $250. This not being paid, the complainant states that she discovered that the security was worthless, therefore caused Nanette to be arrested on a charge of false pretences. The accused was held for an examination, as she denied all the allegations of the complaint.

POLICE TRIALS.

Before Commissioner Brennan.

Twenty patrolmen were tried by Commissioner BRENNAN yesterday, for violation of the rules of the Department.

QUEER PLEA OF CONSTRUCTIVE PRESENCE.

Samuel Hardy, of the Forty-fourth (Brooklyn) Precinct, was charged with being absent two and one-half days without leave. Hardy stated that he had made up his mind to resign from the force, and on the 19th handed in his written resignation and his shield to Captain Waddy at the Station-house. Captain Waddy advised him not to resign. Hardy remained away between two and three days, when he came back and told the Captain he would like to report for duty again, and his shield was returned. Since that time he has been on active duty. The theory of the defendant seemed to be the novel one that the Captain's holding his shield in possession during the time he is charged with delinquency was equivalent to the granting of leave of absence, as a patrolman cannot do duty without this insignia of office. The case was referred to the full Board for decision.

SPECIAL PRIVILEGES OF SPECIAL-DUTY MEN.

William M. Hutchinson, of the Eighth Precinct, had scarcely reached his post on the evening of Good Friday when Officers Casey and Quinn, of the same precinct, who had been sent to a church in Thompson-street, came to him and informed him that they had indicated man they had arrested, for him to take to the Station-house. According to their statement, Hutchinson declined to take charge of the prisoner, giving as a reason that he was on special duty that night, and he did not want to take the prisoner to Court. Defendant denied that that was the reason he did not accede to their request, and he had understood from the instructions of the late Inspector Dilworth that a patrolman who made an arrest should not transfer a prisoner, but attend to the case clear through until a final disposition should be made of it before the proper authority. Captain Waddy, before whom he had said it was customary, when men on special duty made such an arrest, to hand the prisoner to the nearest patrolman. It did not appear whether the motive of not bringing the prisoner to court was the next day was not as likely to operate with the two officers in disposing of their man as with Hutchinson in not desiring to receive him. This case was also referred to the full Board.

WEDNESDAY, March 31—P. M.

The Redistribution of National Currency Bill, passed by the Senate yesterday, makes no increase of National Bank Currency, and no contraction of Greenbacks. It redistributes ten ₱ cent., or $30,000,000, of the National Bank Circulation to the Southern and other States at present without a fair share of banking facilities, as the same may be applied for, the amounts to be withdrawn first from the old States enjoying the largest excess, and with Banks having over $100,000 Circulation, which States will be Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New-York. The large Banks in the Cities of New-York and Boston will be the first and heaviest losers, as it is provided that all Circulations over a million of dollars shall be reduced one third before the general pro rata principle is applied to the smaller Circulations. The last section of the bill authorizes the transfer, bodily, of National Banks and their Circulation from the old States to the South and West, at the option of their Stockholders, and under proper regulations of the Bureau at Washington. This measure, if accepted by the House, will work gross injustice to the Banks of New-England and New-York, and the hardships of surrendering so important a share of their circulation will fall upon the public as well. Indeed, it is by no means certain that the South and West will find a compensating advantage in banking more extensively for themselves, for the loss or serious curtailment of New-York and New-England capital now so liberally employed in the conduct of their trade. It may be that the two Houses will disagree in the adjustment of the bill, as they did at the close of the Fortieth Congress, and so let it go over to the next session. But our opinion—derived from the February as well as the March debates on the subject—is, that the amendment carried by Mr. MORTON yesterday to increase the amount to be redistributed from $20,000,000, as originally reported, to $30,000,000, may render the bill at least partially acceptable to the friends of the so-called Coburn Bill of the House, which is a more sweeping measure, contemplating the distributance of about $75,000,000 of the $300,000,000 National Currency. A day or two will probably decide the whole question for the present session.

An important provision is made in the foregoing Bill to compel the surrender of the Circulation of National Banks which have heretofore or may hereafter go into voluntary liquidation, (and several of which in Albany and Troy in this State have gone back to the old local system,) in ninety days. If the Notes are not so surrendered the Securities are to be sold to a sufficient amount to cover the outstanding Circulation, the proceeds to be deposited in the Treasury and the Circulation assumed to be paid by the United States Treasurer as in the case of suspended Banks in recieverships. This provision is just to the National system, and the wonder is that the original Banking Act should have left the question of the profits derived from such Circulation in doubt; if it really does so.

While the Redistribution Currency Bill goes from the Senate to the House, the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington sends a new and radical proposition to Mr. GARFIELD, Chairman of Banking and Currency, to the effect: First, That the whole banking basis in United States Bonds be reduced to a 4 ₱ cent. 30 years Gold bearing United States Stock. Second, That this new Stock be created to the amount of $437,500,000, so as to give a basis for $350,000,000 National Bank Currency at 80 cents on the dollar. Third, To add $50,000,000 to the present maximum of

The latter guarantee being indorsed by the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Co.

Issue restricted to $1,700,000 on the entire road, which is equal to about $15,000 per mile. This road is now approaching its completion; it traverses a rich and populous district in the State of Indiana, and will upon constitute an important link in the Trunk Line, extending from the Atlantic cities to the Southwest, via Cairo.

The intrinsic value of the road itself, combined with the guarantee of four other important railroad companies, one of which ranks financially among the strongest railroad corporations in the world, render these bonds among the safest investments on the market.

We confidently recommend them as a most desirable security for parties investing for themselves or in trust for others.

Also, Shares in the Capital Stock of said Railway Company, on which Six per Cent. per annum and one half the net earnings of the road, in excess of that amount, is guaranteed to the holders in perpetuity by the same railroad corporations.

A limited quantity of these choice securities are offered for sale on favorable terms by

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS

OF THE

ST. LOUIS AND ST. JOSEPH RAILROAD

OF MISSOURI.

Coupons payable May and Nov. 1, at the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., in the City of New-York. The principal, as well as the interest, is payable in coin. Length of road, 72¼ miles, from the City of St. Joseph to Lexington, making a through line, with the connection now completed from Omaha to St. Louis, and, on completion of the Union and Central Pacific Roads, with San Francisco. The total amount of bonds, all that can be issued, is $1,000,000—less than $14,000 per mile—which are secured by a first mortgage on the entire property of the Company. A portion of the road is now in successful operation; the balance is being rapidly constructed, and will be completed during the Summer.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. are the trustees for the bonds, who receive the money and pay it over to the Company on the completion of each section of the road.

The road is being built entirely with cash, economically and in a substantial manner. The Directors and officers are all men of the highest standing and responsibility. The counties through which it runs are the most populous and richest agricultural districts in the State, making the security first-class—one that we recommend to our friends as a desirable investment, equal, in our estimation, to any we have ever sold. The Kansas-Pacific 7 per cent. Bonds were closed out by us in January last, and are now selling at an advance of from 5 to 6 per cent., and are in good demand at the price. We confidently look for a corresponding, if not greater, advance in the St. Louis and St. Joseph 6 per cent. Bonds.

The Company, through the undersigned, offer a limited amount at 87½, and accrued interest in currency, reserving the right to advance the price without notice. Governments and other marketable securities received at market rates. For pamphlets and further particulars, apply to

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, March 27, 1869.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD of Managers of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, held on the 11th inst., the resignation of I. N. Seymour, Treasurer, was accepted, to take effect on the 1st of April next, and C. P. Hartt, Esq., was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy thus occasioned.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Board on the occasion of Mr. Seymour's retirement:

Resolved, That the resignation of Mr. Seymour be accepted, to take effect on the appointment of his successor.

Resolved, That, while the Board feel themselves constrained to yield to Mr. Seymour's wish to be relieved from duties which have become too burdensome for his failing strength, they cannot suffer him to go without bearing testimony to the singular zeal, faithfulness and ability which have marked throughout his long career of forty-four years in the service of the Company.

Resolved, That the Board do most cordially respond to the kind sentiments expressed in Mr. Seymour's letter, and they take pleasure in assuring him that he will be followed in his retirement by their sincere respect, and their warmest wishes for his welfare.

Resolved, That the President be requested to cause a desk to be provided in the office of the Company, for the use of Mr. Seymour, and to assure him that he will at all times meet a cordial welcome.

G. T. OLYPHANT, President.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

In the Constitutional Cortes, yesterday, the new loan required by the Provisional Government was voted. The Conscription law meets with hostility in the provinces and fresh outbreaks are apprehended.

The Turkish Ambassador has presented his credentials to the King. The Greek Chambers have been dissolved and elections will be held on the 16th of May for the new Legislature.

The Dublin Synod have elected delegates to the Conference on the Irish Church Question.

Leave of absence has been granted to soldiers of infantry regiments in the Bavarian Army.

The Inman steamship City of New-York, with Liverpool mails to March 17 and Queenstown papers to March 18, reached this port yesterday.

CUBA.

The reports of the recapture of the steamer Comandilario are not confirmed. Two volunteers convicted of committing excesses, have been tried and sentenced to exile and imprisonment. The British Consul has sent the gunboat Heron to inquire into the capture of the English ship Jeff. Davis.

Mail news from Havana is dated March 27. Our correspondent supplies details of the seizure, by the Spaniards, of the brig Fanny Lowell, and of the appropriation to revolutionary purposes of the steamship Comandilario, and gives a summary of war news explanatory of previous brief dispatches.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, the Vice-President laid before that body the House concurrent resolution to adjourn on the 6th proximo. Mr. SUMNER moved to lay it on the table. Lost. Mr. FESSENDEN opposed an adjournment. Senators HOWE, THAYER, ROBERTSON, ANTHONY, CONKLING and WARNER participated in the debate upon the question, and Mr. HAMLIN moved to amend the resolution so as to fix upon Saturday, April 10, as the day of adjournment, and Mr. ROBERTSON suggested the 15th of the same month. The morning hour having expired, the Indian Appropriation bill came up as unfinished business. Several amendments were offered and the bill was laid aside and Mr. TRUMBULL, from the Committee of Conference on the Tenure-of-Office bill, read the report of the Committee, which was adopted by a vote of yeas 42, nays 8. The Senate then went into Executive Session and soon after adjourned.

In the House Mr. FERRY reported a new rule requiring the Hall to be cleared of persons not entitled to the privileges of the floor ten minutes before the hour. Adopted. A number of bills were introduced, among them one by Mr. DAWES to prohibit the secret sales or purchases of gold or bonds on account of the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. By Mr. JOHNSON, a bill transferring the County of Sierra, Cal., from the Sacramento Land District to the Marysville Land District, and the County of Mendocino, from the Humboldt Land District to the San Francisco Land District. Mr. CLEVELAND offered a resolution, which was adopted, reciting the purpose of the American Institute to hold an International Exhibition of the Industry of All Nations in New-York in 1870, and asking Government aid in such undertaking. Adopted. The House then took up the question of the Provisional Government of Mississippi. A short debate followed, interrupted by Mr. BUTLER, from the Committee of Conference on the Tenure-of-Office act. The report was adopted, after a short debate, by a vote of yeas 108, nays 67. The House soon after adjourned.

GENERAL.

The freshet seems to be increasing. The Mohawk is rising and is pouring its swollen tide into the Hudson. Docks along the river are submerged. Water, snow and ice cover the track of the Hudson River Railroad for many miles. Large gangs of men are at work at different points along the road clearing it of obstructions.

The farmers of Maryland, Delaware and New-Jersey are already indulging in speculations regarding the coming peach crop. At present, they say, it promises to be good, but they have fears of cold snaps in April.

Mr. F. S. WILSON, living near Clyde, Kansas, a few nights since, heard, as he supposed, some wolves howling near his door. He seized his shot-gun, and going to the door fired at what he took to be a wolf. Next morning he found that it was dogs that had disturbed him, and that he had shot and killed Miss CAROLINE MYERS. It is supposed that she had become bewildered while looking for her cattle, and also hearing the dogs had approached the house of Mr. WILSON only to be shot. The Coroner's jury exonerated Mr. WILSON from all blame.

A man giving his name as CHARLES SMITH was recently arrested in New-Orleans, having in his possession $4,000 in stolen Pacific Railroad bonds. He admitted that they were stolen from Albany, N. Y., and is to be returned to this State to account for them.

Mrs. CLEM, who was recently convicted at Indianapolis, Ind., of murder, was, on Monday, sentenced to imprisonment for life. Her brother, who was held as her accomplice, sometime since confessed to having been implicated in the murder for which she is convicted, and exonerated her. He afterward committed suicide in prison.

The United States having been accepted as a mediator between Spain on the one side, and Chili, Peru and Bolivia on the other, to settle existing difficulties between those Powers, a Commission will sit in Washington in June to arrange a basis of adjustment.

The Payne and Weston walking match made a sad fizzle yesterday at Buffalo. A dispute arose in regard to the detention at a bridge carried away by the freshet. PAYNE came to Buffalo on a freight train and WESTON returned to Girard.

At a hearing before the Massachusetts Legislative Committee yesterday serious charges were preferred against Boston detectives.

Some of the relatives of JAMES L. BLACKSTONE, the Philadelphia murderer and suicide, have arrived from Connecticut. It is fully ascertained that BLACKSTONE was insane at the time of committing the fearful deeds.

An election for town officers took place at Sing Sing yesterday. The Democracy elected their entire ticket.

A woman named MARY DRURY was drowned in a mill pond at Cherry Valley, Mass., yesterday.

WILLIAM LAWSON CARTER committed suicide in Cleveland yesterday by shooting himself. He was supposed to be insane at the time.

The Governor of New-Jersey vetoed yesterday the bill allowing the County of Passaic to issue bonds for the benefit of the Montclair Railroad.

A freight train on the Hudson River Road met with an accident near Castleton yesterday. Nobody hurt.

A colored man is to be nominated for Justice of the Peace of the District of Columbia.

The bill to dispose of all the spare land under water between high and low water mark, in the State of New-Jersey, was lost last night in the Legislature.

Several Germans have located near Charlottesville, Va., and are entering largely into the cultivation of grapes. They are practical men, and speak in glowing terms of the adaptability of the soil and climate to grape growing.

Hon. GEORGE A. HALSEY, who was to have been nominated for Register of the Treasury, will be precluded from accepting the position by the same statute that was a bar to Mr. STEWART. Mr. HALSEY is a manufacturer.

The Twitchell murder case was before the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday. A writ of error was granted.

Attorney-General HOAR argued his first case, in his official position, before the United States Supreme Court yesterday.

A band of Blood Indians in Montana made an attack on a saw-mill at Boston Creek, and were repulsed by the workmen.

Judge S. W. BROCKWAY, a prominent lawyer and politician of California, died yesterday at San Francisco.

Miss CAROLINE A. SMITH was arrested in Chicago recently, charged with having set fire to her rooms. She was held to bail in the sum of $1,000.

Chicago is having a shoemakers' strike.

A man named SAMUEL S. HICKS, of Pleasant Valley, aged 73, committed suicide yesterday.

A ball took place at the Union League Club last night, in commemoration of the entrance of the organization into its present building. The company were spared from speeches by "leading members," and dancing continued far into the morning hours.

One hundred homeless children were sent to the West by the Children's Aid Society yesterday. A special donation of $1,500 was received for the purpose.

From the 1st of January to the 31st of March, 21,544 emigrants were landed at this port.

The receipts in the Thirty-second Collection District during last month amounted to $702,823 14.

Collector GRINNELL was formally installed yesterday afternoon.

During the week ending on Saturday, there were 483 deaths in this City, and 154 in Brooklyn.

The Union-square National Bank was opened yesterday.

The Commissioners of Emigration held their usual fortnightly meeting last night, and took measures to insure a more rapid and comfortable railroad transit for emigrants to the West than has hitherto been experienced.

Rev. Dr. McCOSH, President of Princeton College, New-Jersey, lectured in Brooklyn last evening on "The association of ideas, and its lessons in the training of the mind."

The National Currency and the Banks.

The Supplemental Currency bill, as passed by the Senate, provides for the withdrawal of thirty millions of currency from States whose circulation is in excess of the amounts assigned to them, and its distribution among States and Territories having less than their proportion. Mr. WILSON'S amendment, designed to promote the convenience of Boston at the expense of the country, received little encouragement. The Senate found it impossible to resist the demands of the West and South, and wisely decided that the relief shall be afforded by a redistribution of currency, rather than by a renewal of the inflating process.

We apprehend none of the serious results which the opponents of the measure have conjured up to stay its progress. Much of the excess of circulation now enjoyed by Eastern States finds its way to the West and South under the natural operations of trade. Its transfer, therefore, as a part of the local circulation of these sections, will produce no appreciable effect upon the East save in the matter of bank profits, which may well afford a slight reduction. The benefit to the other States will not take the shape of an actual addition to their circulating medium. The currency will be available at less cost, and under management more likely to develop local enterprise and promote local prosperity. From this point of view, the measure is one of financial and business expediency as well as justice.

Its danger in the House will arise from attempts to increase the amount to be redistributed, and probably also from plans to reconstruct the basis on which the capital of the banks is invested. Sectional greed may jeopardize the success of the bill. The amount it provides is so much smaller than that proposed last session by Mr. COBURN, that it will scarcely be accepted as conclusive without some effort to bring about a change. As it stands, however, the bill reduces the Eastern circulation ten millions more than the sum sanctioned by the Senate Finance Committee; and that should meanwhile suffice. By grasping at more, all may be lost.

Still more probable is it that the whole thing will again come to naught if the question of redistribution be incumbered with the considerations involving the substitution of bonds at a lower rate of interest, which are reported as having been presented to the House Banking Committee by the Comptroller of the Currency. On their own merits, Mr. HULBURD'S suggestions in regard to the adoption by the banks of four per cent. bonds, in the place of those now used, seem desirable. If conversion is ever or anywhere to be compulsory, certainly the national banks, with their substantial privileges, may be required to take the first steps. They might be properly required further to do something definite by way of preparing for specie payments. But these are issues which it is not desirable to raise at this moment; and if the House Committee endeavor to fasten them upon the present bill, we predict for it defeat. Is it possible that Mr. HULBURD'S plan for reopening the bank question is intended to have this effect? The proposal to increase the total of bank circulation, with a proportionate cancellation of greenbacks, looks like a device for the special accommodation of Boston; and, so regarded, it should have little chance of success.

Final Action of Congress on the Tenure Bill.

It will be seen by the proceedings of Congress that the Committee of Conference on the Tenure-of-Office bill made their report yesterday, and immediate action on the question was taken by both Houses. The Senate agreed to the report by a vote of yeas 42, nays 8,—all those voting in the negative being Democrats, except Senator SPRAGUE, of Rhode Island. The House took similar action on the report as soon as it was brought in. In the House, the vote was, yeas 106, nays 67, —all the Democrats, with a few Republicans, voting against the report. In neither Senate nor House was there any debate—the whole ground having been gone over so frequently and elaborately heretofore that no point was left for discussion. Senator TRUMBULL, on submitting the report which was adopted, explained that the measure, as it now stands, provides that when an officer was suspended by the President he should be reinstated at the end of the next session of the Senate, unless the nomination of his successor had been confirmed in the meantime. Our readers, however, will find the terms of the bill in the Congressional report. The practical unity of the Republican members on the final settlement of the question is worthy of remark, after the party manœuvring in connection with it during the last fortnight.

The Sirocco Blast Appearing.

If "a peck of March dust is worth a King's ransom," as the abstruse philosophy of an old adage asserts, then surely our beloved and begrimed metropolis is wealthy beyond computation. She might furnish from her unswept thoroughfares a sufficient quantity of the pulverized material to redeem from captivity all the imprisoned monarchs of the globe. But in spite of our vast accumulations of this sort of value, the sovereign people yet remain in abject bondage to their master WHITING. From them he remorselessly exacts, on each recurring fortnight, a heavy tribute, requiring payment to be made in pictured greenbacks, and absolutely refusing us the privilege of coming "down with the dust" in any other form.

The beneficent rain-falls of the past few days have done much toward cleansing the streets of their more offensive accumulations, but in many sections of the City the pavements are concealed by compact layers of refuse which nothing short of a deluge could sweep away. From this mass of impurity, which Mr. WHITING fails to remove with his spades and brooms, the blustering winds that are now upon us will extract the moisture, and then will follow the blinding era of all-pervading dust. A visitation of this sort is in store. The noble army of WHITING'S sweepers and shovelers are yet in their Winter's sleep. It is vain to look for help to them, and it is equally certain that succor can come from no other direction. Already the dust clouds begin to gather, and they will soon break upon us in all their multiform destructiveness. Our eyes are to be inflamed, our whiskers infiltrated, the chignons of our wives and daughters are to grow gray before their time, our cuticle, which unfortunately is not that of the pachydermata, is to be penetrated, and our dry goods are to be damaged beyond repair. The culmination of all these dire troubles is, that the fateful peck of dust which each of us is bound to consume during the period of this mortal life, must be disposed of in the brief space of a week, instead of being taken inadvertently and in infinitesimal doses, which naturally should be administered only in the course of years.

Seriously, the afflictions under which we groan in regard to the neglect of the street-cleaning contractor are too real. In Summer the health of our people is imperiled by the premium to pestilence which our frowsy streets hold out; and in Winter an embargo is often laid upon facile travel by accumulations of snow and ice which could have been removed by the smallest exhibition of foresight and proper attention to the culverts. The topographical features of the City render it as easy to cleanse as any city in the world; but year after year, through fraud and impotence, we move in the same unsatisfactory and disgraceful groove.

Perhaps Mr. WHITING is no worse than his predecessors who have undertaken the work of street-cleaning, and failed of accomplishing it. This fact, however, has no bearing upon the question. There is a radical defect in the contract system. We incline to the belief that it may be found in putting the work of the entire City in the hands of a single individual. The experiment of contracting for the street-cleaning by Wards presents many points in its favor, and would be well worth a trial. Will the Mayor and Common Council take the subject into consideration?

Mayor Hall and the Gift Swindlers.

Mayor HALL is utilising his discoveries in "Crime-land" in an incursion upon the denizens of "Jeremy-Diddlerville"; and it is a raid for which his Honor deserves the thanks of everybody in general and unsophisticated country people in particular. "I beg to caution strangers," says the Mayor, "against New-York coöperative unions, or gift enterprises, or dollar stores, or any other scheme whereby value is promised greater than the price asked to be paid. Every such advertised scheme is necessarily a swindle." And so on, with some circumlocution, and more good sense and good advice.

There are, in truth, two kinds of dollar stores, whereof one has thus far given value for value, and does not deserve condemnation, while the other pretends to give you the worth of your money "and a splendid gift besides"—and hence is, in Mayor HALL'S phrase, "necessarily a swindle." So, too, there are good "coöperative unions" and very bad ones. We believe, however, that all "gift enterprises" are great humbugs.

It is these last, especially, that, in Mayor HALL'S words, "use the mails for false pretences." A rural individual is tempted, by the mania for speculation, to invest a dollar or two in a gift enterprise or grand combination lottery in New-York. It is only a dollar or two, anyway, he argues, and in desperation he lets it go. He is agreeably surprised, or at least relieved, to receive by return mail a circular, "acknowledging receipt," and so forth. In due time, he is still more agreeably surprised to learn from the "Company" that he has drawn a prize valued at $500 or $1,000, as the case may be. Accompanying this is an urgent desire to know "if it shall be sent on by express, carefully packed, at our expense." That, of course, overjoys him—it is probably a Steinway piano. He prepares to write tremblingly "Yes," when his eye is arrested by an "N. B.—As the large expenses of transportation, insurance, storage, &c., are met by us, we have adopted the rule to charge two per cent. [or "five," as the case may be,] on all prizes, and you are requested to forward the amount, $10, [or $50] by return mail, on penalty of forfeiture." The innocent speculator hurries, with some misgiving, to comply, and, sure enough, receives, by the next "express," a package covered all over with sealing wax, and containing—certificates of 500 shares of stock in the Oily Gammon Petroleum Company, "whose land alone," says the accompanying circular, "is valued at ten millions."

That is one way, and only one of many, in which the fool and his money are parted. Mayor HALL uses strong and unqualified language, but just the right language, in denouncing them. It is "the unwary" that are mainly swindled. It is very rare that a City dupe is "done" beyond his original dollar. The "prizes" are all reserved for the country bumpkin, because he may be induced to forward the "percentage" by mail, and cannot find out what his prize is without doing so. "The fools are not all dead;" and because they are not they need such warnings against folly.

The Pacific Railroad Litigation.

For some time past a cloud of suspicion has hung over the affairs of the various Pacific Railroads. It may be remembered that in 1864 Congress passed a bill subordinating the lien of the United States for its loans in aid of these roads to that of bonds issued by the railroad companies for an equal amount; that the bill passed in the House without a call of the yeas and nays, and that it was openly charged that many of the members voting for the measure had a direct interest in it. Mr. WASHBURN, in particular, never hesitated to denounce the action of his fellow-members as corrupt, and incurred much enmity by his blunt speeches on the subject. Two or three years afterward the directors of the Union Pacific Railroad reported to their constituents that a secret service fund of $500,000 had been expended for purposes which they did not specify, and intelligent persons naturally drew their own inferences.

But it seems probable that $500,000 is but a very small part of the interest which members of Congress had in the passage of the bill which, in effect, threw away the claim of the United States for the repayment of its enormous advances to the Pacific Railroad. Recent developments have shown that a single corporation, known as the "Credit Mobilier of America," has realized enormous profits out of the construction of the Pacific Railroad, amounting, according to the sworn statement of one of the directors of the Pacific Road, to over thirty millions of dollars. This Credit Mobilier, which has thus swallowed up the proceeds of all the bonds issued in aid of the road, as well as of the mortgage bonds, is composed of a few persons, some of whom were members of the Congress which voted to sacrifice the lien of the Government loan, some of them representatives of and trustees for such members, and the rest, persons who aided these members in concocting the scheme, or who bought out their interest.

A great deal of Congressional wisdom has been wasted in pretended efforts to investigate the affairs of these railroads; but two or three days' work before a Court of justice has sufficed to lay bare one of the most monstrous frauds that was ever perpetrated upon any Government.

This disclosure has come out incidentally from the effort of one of the stockholders of the Union Pacific Railroad Company to establish his claim to a portion of its profits. It seems that the directors of this Company were unwilling that the fruits of their genius should be wasted by distribution among those who had not planned the scheme. Accordingly, they devised a plan by which the construction of the road should absorb every dollar of the Company's funds, and commit the construction, and of course the funds, to their own charge. To this end they gave the building contract for one part of the road to the Credit Mobilier, for another part to a mythical person, said to be named DAVIS, but whose real individuality appears to include half a dozen of the directors, including another Congressman of 1864, hailing, like Mr. AMES, from Massachusetts.

The Vice-President of the Company, when forced to testify, admitted that these contracts had been made at rates varying from $42,000 to $96,000 per mile,—prices notoriously equal to thrice the actual cost of construction. And on comparing these prices with the receipts of the Company, it will be found that they are calculated, with great exactness, to strip the Company, as such, of every penny of its funds, so that in a short time its property may be sold under foreclosure of the first mortgage bonds, leaving the United States to look where it may for its paltry loans of $30,000,000 to $50,000,000.

The directors of the Company, alarmed at the exposure which has even in this short time been made of their transactions, have twice appealed to Congress for relief. Last Summer they pushed through a bill intended to enable them to remove all suits brought against them into the Federal Courts, which only sit at long intervals, and in which they could not be required to answer for at least six months. Failing in this project through the want of proper words in the statute, they have persuaded the ever-indulgent House of Representatives to pass another bill for their accommodation, enabling them to remove their offices and books to any one of a dozen cities or villages, and forbidding any State Court from interfering with their schemes. This bill halts in the Senate; but we observe that a Senatorial friend of Congressman AMES is diligently working to help the measure through in a slightly different shape.

We think it is about time that Congress should leave this matter alone. Bad as may be our State Courts, there is no evidence or appearance in this case of any injustice having been done to these directors; and our Courts have done good service to the public in throwing light upon these transactions. The attempt to transfer the cause to the Federal Courts is not inspired by a love of justice, but by a desire to protect gigantic frauds from exposure. Congress has no inclination to investigate the charges made against its own members; and the United States Courts have not adequate facilities for a prompt and thorough examination of the parties. Let it be understood that this is the very reason why such vehement efforts are now made to transfer this investigation to those tribunals, and no member of Congress, not interested in these flagitious proceedings, will give the slightest countenance to the measure.

The Changes in the Real Estate Market.

A very decided change for the better is noticeable in the sales of real estate in this City and vicinity. For a time, the market was so inflated that men of sober judgment, seeking means of investment for their capital, hesitated to buy, and fears were entertained that the army of speculators who really controlled the sales, would continue their rascally practices until the bubble should finally burst, thousands be ruined thereby, and the confidence of the general public be so thoroughly shaken, that until next Fall at least, real estate would be drug.

Fortunately, this has been avoided. The speculators overreached themselves. In their great desire to purchase all the desirable property offered, they had not calculated on the immense amount available. Before they commenced operations a large number of legitimate purchasers had secured all they wished; when the rise commenced others were frightened off, and for several weeks the amount of property purchased by persons who honestly intended improving it, was so small as to be scarcely worthy of note. Most of the property so sold was purchased with the idea that before the second payment fell due, say sixty days, it could be put in the market and sold again, and that the increase in price would yield the operator a handsome profit. This proved a mistaken idea. Honest buyers refused to compete, believing the excitement could not last long, and that it would be more profitable to wait than to buy. The speculators, meanwhile, kept on buying more and more lots, but selling none, until finally their money was all locked up. The sales were too great for them, and they were obliged to withdraw. The result was a sudden decline in the market, and during the latter days of the week just closed it was perfectly flat.

The fact that this wild excitement has ended is gradually becoming known, and the public are slowly regaining confidence. Substantial men are once more being interested, and it is probable that the purchase of real estate as an investment will soon again come into favor. The bold operators who did so much to break up the market will scarcely be seen in it again this season, unless they are forced there, to sell some of the lots they bought at such extravagant prices, and on which they are now unable to pay interest or to meet the second installments, which are rapidly falling due. In this way it is quite probable very many desirable lots, in addition to the ordinary supply, will be offered at public and private sale, and, as the great objectionable feature is now almost entirely removed, they may be purchased at prices about equal to their actual worth.

We shall continue, in our real estate department, to give our readers each morning the latest and most reliable information concerning sales and transfers, and endeavor to keep them fully informed on all matters connected with real estate in and about New-York.

MINOR TOPICS.

We direct special attention to the masterly letter of Commissioner WELLS, in vindication of his late report on the capital and labor of the country, which has been assailed with so much bitterness and personal feeling by writers ignorant of the vast array of facts on which he based his conclusions. He now demonstrates beyond cavil the accuracy of his former statements. He shows that the commodities of life and the necessaries of life have in the last eight years gone up in a ratio far beyond that which the wages of the working classes have gone up; and in regard to prices, rents, wages, and other matters of social and industrial economy, he gives material enough to keep Messrs. KELLEY and CAREY thinking for the rest of their lives. The facts cannot be put down by the weak and flippant pleas of Mr. KELLEY in behalf of the monopolists and high protectionists; and still less can they be put down by the base and shameless charge of Mr. CAREY, that Mr. WELLS had been hired with "British gold" to advocate the rights and interests of the working classes of America, or rather the rights and interests of the American people—for, in a true statement of the case, the rights and interests of any one class of the people are the rights and interests of the whole community. When Mr. WELLS in his report showed that in this country the "rich are growing richer and the poor poorer," he had volumes of solid truth to build on; and no one should hereafter attempt to impugn his assertions until they are able to remove his foundations.

Great complaint is made of the neglect of City clergymen to comply with the provisions of the Health laws in respect to sending in returns of marriages. In two cases where the neglect has been persistent, in spite of repeated warnings, the delinquents are to be prosecuted for the penalty of violating the law. The wise purpose of the enactment is patent, and the clerical profession ought to be the first to see it. The offending clergymen should be taught a lesson that will be not only salutary upon themselves but upon all their brethren.

The third of Senator SPRAGUE'S extraordinary speeches in the Senate, which we published yesterday, will attract as wide attention as those which preceded it. His accusation of Congress for its corruption, imbecility and ignorance, was only less startling than the proofs with which he attempted to sustain the charges. The perfect frankness of the Senator, in connection with these speeches, is the most striking feature connected with them. When one of his statements, concerning the decay of industry and the ruin of the smaller manufacturers, was challenged, he acknowledged that he, himself, had attained his business prosperity, during the last few years, "only by crushing out all smaller competitors." When he spoke of Congressional corruption, he said he himself knew of a member who had been asked to report upon a certain matter in a certain way, and the temptation held out before him was $100,000. For this startling charge the Senator should be at once "investigated" by a special committee, and the Senate must at once take steps to clear its skirts of the infamy. The Senator also charged, in general, that these corruptive influences are to-day riding roughshod over all the industrial interests of this country, while, at the same time, all the members of Congress are glorifying each other's smartness, and declaiming about the country's prosperity. Senator SPRAGUE has certainly "struck a vein" in his late speeches, and it is gratifying to witness the courage and independence of the brave young nabob of the Senate.

It was supposed that Judge SUTHERLAND would render a decision yesterday upon the application for a stay of proceedings in the case of JOHN REAL, the convicted murderer of Policeman SMEDICK. His Honor, however, postponed his decision until to-day. It is expected that the Court will grant the motion, and that the execution will not take place to-morrow.

We wish that every negro in the country could be made rich and happy. We believe the thing is feasible, and that nothing more is required to bring it about in course of time than that each and every individual of the colored race should be industrious and virtuous, intelligent and enterprising. We know of no other way;—we don't believe in trying any other way. We are sure the very worst way that could possibly be tried would be for the Government to accede to the terms of a petition which is now being circulated for the supposed benefit of our negro population. That petition after declaring that the Freed People have long borne a heavy burden, puts forth in the ensuing prayer addressed to Congress, a "proposition believed to be the claim of justice, which is the voice of God:"

"We ask for an appropriation of $100,000,000 in land, for the benefit of the children whose fathers and their fathers' fathers have toiled for us for naught, vainly looking for the day in which we now live—viz.: $50,000,000 from the General Government and $50,000,000 from the States, each State to pay according to its aggregate wealth. All money paid by each State to be invested in land in said State for its poor. All contracts made for land with each State or its citizens, to be filled at the Treasury Department of the Government and States."

Though there may be no chance of this preposterous scheme being adopted, even though WENDELL PHILLIPS and the Tribune begin to declaim in favor of it, we have no doubt that thousands of people can be got to sign the petition, for there could be no petition drawn up on any side of any subject to which thousands of signatures could not be obtained. But were the hundred millions of dollars, or ten times the sum, donated to the blacks to-morrow, and distributed among them, it would do more to ruin them than all that freedom has done thus far to save them. We cannot elevate a people by making them paupers.

The foreign correspondents of the TIMES often send us very interesting accounts and facts. In our last number—to say nothing of humorous "Monadnock"—we had a piece of a stone epistle from our Florence correspondent—a page of his letter being written on paper made from the fibre of asbestos. Signor DEL CORONA has a plentiful mine of this substance, from which a pulp is made, and then paper. He offers it to the world as a good thing—for it makes towels and textures as well as paper, and these resist fire. A lady's asbestos dress would be no bad invention in these kerosene times. But then an old newspaper would refuse to kindle your fire. Most good things have their weak points.

Our cavaliers of the cock-pit must look sharp. Philadelphia has declared war on the order, through its Prevention of Cruelty Society, and Mr. BERGH may break out here in some unexpected manner. The Philadelphia "ring" was comfortably seated, and the game chickens about to begin, when the Police walked in and took over forty of the spectators off to the Station-house. "The rest they ran away," as the old song says.

Miss IDA LEWIS, rowing in a squall from the lighthouse kept by her father, in Newport harbor, rescued two soldiers from drowning. She did not have the assistance of her father, as the gentle GRACE DARLING did on the occasion when she won immortality. The eight-line item recording this brave act was published by the TIMES in the same issue containing the two-column report of the Woman's Suffrage Convention at Boston. The fact in the brief item was, everything considered, more interesting than the speeches in the report. Miss LEWIS is a strong-minded woman of a type as rare as it is noble.

ENNOMATO, the Japanese Admiral, has been doing very notable things latterly—taking possession of the whole Island of Yesso, making a provisional Government there, and warning all the Consuls that he will hold the dependency for the Tycoon and other clans and chiefs exiled by the Mikado. With his war-ships at sea and his batteries on land, he will probably give the Government of the boy Emperor some trouble. It is not likely that the Tokugawa would sit down contentedly under his ostracism; and in all probability both the Admiral and himself rely a good deal on the feelings of the foreigners in their favor.

It seems the gift enterprise people are stealing the livery of the coöperation people. The Mayor warns the country folks against "coöperative unions" as a species of the gift enterprise swindle. It is to be hoped the mechanics won't be deterred from continuing their coöperative unions.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theatrical.

WOOD'S MUSEUM.

Miss MARRIOTT appeared here as Margaret Elmore last evening. The actress was laboring against a severe hoarseness through the entire performance, which increased as the scenes wore on, and the painful struggle marred what might otherwise have been a spirited representation. The one or two scenes which redeem the play and the character from the grave of dead plays and obsolete rôles were noisily given, in spite of the hoarseness; for the new actress is full of voice, and what she lacks in inspiration she supplies with that excessive action of the lungs which was the front and foremost feature of the old, old school of acting. There was also a deal of sound and fury about Mr. CATHCART'S performance of Matthew Elmore, although here and there, and noticeably in the confession episode of the third act, his sonorous tones might pass for the expression of real feeling in communities where better things had not been seen and heard a score of times before. Miss HARLAND gave a cheerful and hearty performance of The Widow, and Mr. SOL SMITH'S Jean Ruse was not without its merits. To-night "Hamlet" is to be repeated by Miss MARRIOTT, and on Friday Margaret Elmore.

WAVERLEY THEATRE.

BYRON, who wrote many clever burlesques, when burlesques were in fashion in England, and before he found more humane and profitable employment than fracturing the English language, invented none more clever than his amusing parody upon the story of "Ivanhoe." The translation of the "Lists at Ashby" into a circus performance indicates the way in which the serious romance has been tortured. Other transformations quite as absurd mark the rest of the piece. Several years ago it was produced with popular success at Winter Garden by Mrs. WOOD and Mr. JEFFERSON. Its revival last evening at the Waverley Theatre occurred before quite a large audience, and the performance passed along quietly. There are no artists in the troupe equal to those concerned in its original production here, but there is a congregation of graceful forms and pretty faces in the revival that will probably renew its original success. A new débutante in burlesque, Mis MAGGIE DESMOND, made her début as Wamba, the fool, but she did not appear to understand the distinction between silliness and folly. Mr. JAMES LEWIS, as Rebecca, made the best impression of all. The piece is produced with new scenery, and is announced for every evening and a matinée on Saturday.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

Mlle. JANAUSCHEK appeared here last evening as Deborah in MOSENTHAL'S admired tragedy. The audience was slender and unworthy the very earnest personation which this possessed and well-tempered artist gave. It is needless to detail again the points of excellence in the performance; we dealt with it at length last season, and no changes mark Mlle. JANAUSCHEK'S personal effort. The lesser parts were scarcely sustained with the animation of previous performances, however, and the delivery of the noble debate between charity and doubt, which distinguishes the second act, passed without a round of applause, even for the sentiments of the scene. On Friday evening Mlle. JANAUSCHEK will appear as Elisabeth for the second and last time.

Trouble Among French Actors.

On Saturday last a dispute occurred at the rehearsal of "La Vie Parisienne" at the French Theatre, between two of the actors—Messrs. CARRIER and GABEL—relative to the positions they should occupy on the stage during a certain scene. The dispute ended in blows, but the combatants were quickly separated, and it was supposed that that was the end of the matter. On Sunday, however, each actor sent the other a challenge to deadly combat, and it was agreed that the duel should take place on the following morning. One of the principals named swords as his weapon, while the other was in favor of pistols, and neither was willing to give way. Then, too, one wanted to go to Canada to fight, while the other thought the classic shades of the Elysian Fields would be a more fitting locality. While these preliminaries were being settled, the police got notice of the affair, but before any arrest could be made, one of the belligerents, who was evidently not "spoiling for a fight," backed out altogether, and the affair of course ended. It is said that Mr. GABEL has withdrawn from the French Theatre in consequence of the quarrel.

A Generous Gift.

The rooms of the Children's Aid Society presented an interesting scene yesterday. The son of one of the leading families of the City having attained his majority, his mother conceived the generous idea of making the festive day equally happy to the most unfortunate class in a large city—the homeless children. Accordingly the sum of $1,500 was sent to the Society, to dispatch 100 hundred homeless children to the West. Throngs of newsboys and street-boys gathered together, as well as other homeless little ones from the lodging-houses and poor quarters of the City, and the large company started, with new clothes and bright faces, by the 5 o'clock train on the Erie Road for the distant West, under charge of Mr. J. P. BRACE. No one young man in New-York will hereafter command a greater power of doing good than he whose majority was so humanely celebrated yesterday. It is to be hoped that his future years may be marked by as generous actions as was the first day of his manhood.

Funeral of Lieutenant J. J. Casey, United States Army.

This brilliant young officer, whose death at Fort Washington, Md., from an accidental shot at the hands of a private in the battalion which he was drilling, was noted in our Washington telegrams of Sunday, was buried yesterday from his father's house in this City. Lieutenant CASEY was formerly a pupil in Grammar School No. 23, in this City, and from there graduated into the Free Academy. From the Sophomore class in the latter institution, upon the recommendation of Hon. BEN. WOOD, he was appointed to a cadetship at West Point, where he distinguished himself by his scholarship and manly bearing. Upon graduating he received a Lieutenant's commission in the Fourth United States Artillery, and was assigned to duty at the post where he met his untimely fate.

Union League Reception.

A ball took place at the Union League Club last night, it being the first anniversary of the entrance of the Club into the present building, corner of Madison-avenue and Twenty-sixth-street. A great crowd was in attendance, consisting of the members and their families, with many invited guests. Among the latter were the army and navy officers at present stationed here. A band was in attendance for dancing and another for promenading. The Union League consists largely of rich, energetic and intelligent citizens of New-England birth, blended with others of New-York nativity and family antecedents.

Presentation to a Faithful Officer.

The members of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, in East Thirteenth-street, met in the main audience-room on Tuesday evening last, and agreeably surprised their late Secretary, Mr. JOSHUA ROBERTS, by presenting to him an elegant and costly gold watch, a handsomely-

Two Volunteers Exiled—The Comandi-tario not Recaptured—A British Fleet to Cruise the Bahamas.

HAVANA, Wednesday, March 31.

Two volunteers have been tried and convicted of committing excesses on Sunday last, and have been sentenced to exile and imprisonment.

The reports of the recapture of the steamer Comandi-tario are not confirmed.

HAVANA, Tuesday, March 30, } via KEY WEST, Wednesday, March 31. }

The British Consul has sent the gunboat Heron to Caibarien, where the British ship Jeff Davis, captured by a Spanish cruiser, has arrived. The volunteers at Caibarien seized two Cuban passengers, RAFAEL FALERO and FRANCISCO JEMINEZ, as they landed from the Jeff Davis, and immediately shot them. The Captain and crew have been thrown into jail. The British Consul expects to have a British fleet soon cruising in the Bahamas.

Two steamers and two schooners have landed men and arms at Cape Maisi, the extreme eastern point of the island.

Advices from Santiago to the 22d report that the steamer Cricket and two schooners had landed expeditions on the northern shore. LOPEZ CAMARA had returned from Mayari.

News has been received from Nuevitas to the 24th. The insurgents were very active in the vicinity. The Government troops had reoccupied Manoti, and expect to restore communications with Tunas.

Internal Revenue Seizures in Louisiana—Bids for Levee Bonds.

NEW-ORLEANS, Wednesday, March 31.

Supervisor CRESSY to-day seized two large tobacco factories in this city belonging to JULIUS FLATOW and J. D. FRITZ, for alleged frauds upon the revenue.

Bids were opened to-day by the State Treasurer for $990,000, levee bonds, which are hypothecated to various banks for loans. The highest bidders, RICHTENSTINE & Co, being unknown, and having no representative present to deposit ten per cent. as a guarantee, the award was made to HUNT & MCCAULEY, as follows: $50,000 eights at 84, $50,000 eights at 83¼, $67,000 eights at 83, $300,000 sixes at 66⅔, $300,000 sixes at 66 1-16, $223,000 sixes at 67⅛. The bonds are to be delivered during April, with the coupons due May 1 detached. After the payment of the loans for which these bonds are pledged, the balance is to be placed to the credit of the Board of Public Works.

In the suit of CHARLES MORGAN against the New-Orleans and Opelousas Railroad on the overdue coupons of the mortgage bonds, Judge DUREL ordered that the Company be notified to pay the amount sued for, with costs, by the 1st of April, 1869, or in default, the road to be sold. The total amount of the past-due coupons is $606,000. This action virtually throws the road into the hands of the mortgagees.

The Montclair Bill Vetoed—Lands Under Water in New-Jersey.

TRENTON, N. J., Wednesday, March 31.

The Governor this morning vetoed the bill to allow municipal governments to issue bonds for the benefit of the Montclair Railroad.

The Riparian bill giving the State the right to dispose of all spare lands under water between low and high water mark, was lost at a late hour last night in the Assembly.

Both Houses will adhere to the resolution to adjourn on the 2d of April.

The Riparian bill, which passed last night, was reconsidered to-day, and amended so as to give the shore owner the right to go to a jury if he does not like the award of the Commissioners as to the value of his land.

The bill putting a tax of two per cent. on the net income of bankers, brokers, incorporated banks and savings institutions, express companies and all corporations who do not now pay a tax to the State by contract, was passed.

The Newark Park bill passed the House.

Grave Charges Against Detectives—The Boston Herald.

BOSTON, Wednesday, March 31.

At a hearing to-day before the Legislative Committee on the Metropolitan Police for Boston, grave very charges were made by GEORGE H. GOODING against members of the Detective Police, developed in the arrest and conviction of JENNINGS and STEADMAN for robbing his (GOODING'S) safe, which was accomplished mainly by his own efforts. The charges are to be thoroughly investigated.

E. C. BAILEY retired to-day from the Boston Herald, having sold the establishment to Messrs. R. M. PULSIFER, GEORGE G. BAILEY, JUSTIN ANDREWS, EDWIN B. HASKELL and CHARLES H. ANDREWS, all of whom have been attached to the paper several years. Mr. BAILEY has been proprietor and chief manager of the Herald fifteen years, and leaves it one of the most popular and profitable newspapers in New-England.

Another Walking Match Failure.

BUFFALO, Wednesday, March 31.

The Payne-Weston walking match of 108 miles, for a purse of $500, came to a sudden termination this afternoon. When within 21 miles of this city a dispute arose as to the time to be allowed for detention at the Cattaraugus bridge, the bridge having been carried away by the freshet. PAYNE came to this city by a freight train, and WESTON returned to Girard. Much indignation is expressed by parties interested in bets, &c. Eighty-two miles were walked over the worst of roads in twenty-two hours.

THE SPRING FLOODS.

The Flood in the Hudson River—The Freshet in the Interior—Great Damage to Property.

ALBANY, Wednesday, March 31.

The water is from eight to ten feet deep on the piers and docks. The river is free of ice at this point, but blocked up below. The freshet is now subsiding slightly. No trains have arrived from the West since yesterday afternoon, owing to the flooding of the track at different points. It was deemed imprudent to send trains forward.

Between St. Johnsville and Fort Plain the track was submerged for a distance of four or five miles, and a short piece of the track was washed away. Half a mile west of Clyde the track was under water nearly a foot. At Rochester the water raised twelve inches in twenty-four hours, but the river is free of ice or drift wood. The only detention to trains on the Central Road was between St. Johnsville and Fort Plain, but it is all right now, as the water is falling slowly. The train from the West, due here at 9:30 last evening, is expected to arrive here at 1 o'clock. Trains due at 1, 2 and 7 o'clock this morning will arrive between 1 and 2 o'clock this afternoon. The train west from here at 6 o'clock last evening was detained about fourteen hours at St. Johnsville. All the trains are now in motion and are expected to get through with but little delay. There is no trouble on the Hudson River, Harlem and Boston roads. The weather here is mild with a strong northwest wind.

HUDSON, Wednesday, March 31.

The night express train which left New-York at 6 o'clock last night was detained at Hudson nearly five hours. Superintendent TOUCEY is at Castleton, and large gangs of men are at work clearing the road. One track is now being used, and trains are running on fair time. There is also trouble on the New-York Central Road; the Pacific express and two other trains had not reached Albany at 7 o'clock this morning.

The Hudson River is much swollen at all points.

At 10 o'clock this morning the ice was crowded into the channel here by the northwest wind, and was badly dammed up in front of the city. The steamer Nupha was thrown against a pier, damaging her to a considerable extent. The tugboat Columbia is outside on a field of ice, and will probably be driven ashore with the ice under the heavy wind now prevailing. At Bristol the ice is badly dammed, and also at Krum Elbow, below Poughkeepsie.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Wednesday, March 31.

The freshet up the river continues, and last night operated disastrously.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Wednesday, March 31.

The water in the Mohawk has been fifteen feet above the low-water mark here to-day. It rose to within six inches of the old Mohawk Bridge. The ice for two miles above here remains stationary, resting against the bridge. The entire valley for a few miles above the city is submerged, and the lower part of the city was submerged this afternoon, and persons passed from house to house in skiffs. The ice, it was thought, would go out to-day, and fears were entertained that the old bridge would be carried away; but the water finally receded, and at evening it had gone down over a foot.

BUFFALO, Wednesday, March 31.

The river and creeks in every direction are much swollen by the heavy rains and general thaw. The mails have been detained, and much damage is reported.

At Tonawanda Creek a boat containing five men, who were engaged in picking up driftwood, was stove by being carried by the current against the bow of a vessel near by. Two of the men, ALBERT MARRIOTT and ALFRED DUPONT, were drowned. MARRIOTT leaves a wife and two children in Chicago, and DUPONT a wife and two children in Tonawanda.

POUGHKEEPSIE, March 31—Evening.

To-night the freshet in the upper Hudson assumes a serious aspect. The water and ice covers the track of the Hudson River Railroad between Stuyvesant and Schodack to the depth of two feet. The train which left New-York at 11:30 this morning lies at Stuyvesant Station unable to proceed further. The night express down, which left Albany at 5 o'clock P. M., came as far south as Castleton, and was compelled to return. All the down trains south of Hudson have been discontinued for the night.

11 O'CLOCK P. M.—The latest reports from above state that the ice has broken away at Castleton, and is running very fast. The water in the river there is still rising. The trains which left New-York at 3:45 P. M. and 6 P. M. are lying at Hudson, where they will remain at present. Two trains have been made up at Hudson to come south.

Indian Raids in Montana—Stolen Stock Recaptured.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Wednesday, March 31.

Montana advices state that the soldiers and citizens who went in pursuit of the Indians after the late fight near Yellow Stone, recaptured the stolen stock but did not overtake the Indians. The two Indians implicated in the attack on the Diamond Railroad train have been hung at Sunny River.

A band of Blood Indians made a raid on a saw mill at Boston Creek, twenty miles from Diamond City, a few days ago, but were repulsed by the workmen. The Indians succeeded, however, in running off the stock belonging to the mill.

Accident to a Freight Train on the Hudson River Railroad.

The through freight train of thirty cars, which left Albany at 8 o'clock last night, proceeded to a short distance south of Castleton, when the locomotive Troy, which was drawing the train, ran off the track into the river, turning over on its side. Ten loaded cars also ran off, three of them upsetting. The track this morning, between Stuyvesant and Shodack, is partially covered with water. In the accident no one was hurt, the engineer and fireman saving themselves by jumping.

The Union Pacific Track Twenty Miles West of Ogden.

OMAHA, Wednesday, March 31.

Two miles of track were laid yesterday on the Union Pacific Railroad, reaching a point more than twenty miles west of Ogden, and about fifty-five miles east of Monument Point. Parties just arrived from California report the Central Pacific Railroad blockaded by snow, and that the work of construction has been nearly suspended on that account.

Blackstone, the Murderer and Suicide, Ascertained to Have Been Insane.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, March 31.

Some of the relatives of Mrs. JAMES L. BLACKSTONE have arrived here from Madison, Conn., and will to-morrow return home, bearing with them the murderer and his victims. It has been fully ascertained that BLACKSTONE was insane, and that insanity was heredetary in his family.

ALBANY.

The Substitute for the Excise Bill—The Broadway Surface Railroad.

[Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Wednesday, March 31.

Mr. MITCHELL'S substitute for the Compromise Excise bill was up again in Committee of the Whole, this evening, when Mr. BENDER, (German Republican,) from Buffalo, offered an amendment excluding lager beer from the operation of the bill, or from any other law now on the statute book relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors. The amendment was adopted by a viva voce vote, and nearly unanimously, every Republican voting yea.

Mr. HITCHMAN then offered an amendment prohibiting arrests for violation of the law without warrant, which, after considerable discussion, in which Mr. LA BORE made a powerful argument against the amendment and in support of the law, was rejected by a strict party vote—yeas 46, nays 60. The bill, as amended, was then ordered to a third reading by an unanimous vote.

The friends of the Broadway Surface Railroad bill, introduced by Mr. GENET, had a hearing before the Senate Railroad Committee this evening. Their spokesman was Judge PORTER, and the only impression left on the minds of the Committee by his speech was its striking inferiority to the one he delivered last year on the other side, when he appeared as counsel for the opponents of a Broadway railroad. It is said that the projectors of this odious and thrice-defeated measure are determined to push it through this session, if money and log-rolling can do it. Monopolists asked for an adjournment of their hearing before the Committee on Cities until Tuesday next, which was granted by a bare majority of the Committee. They hope to stave off action on the bill before the Committee until it is too late to pass it this session.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE....ALBANY, Wednesday, March 31.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

By Mr. CREAMER—Confirming the title of the City of New-York to the so-called Ganzevoort property.

By Mr. TWEED—Equalizing the terms of office of all local Judges in the City and County of New-York, making the same six years where hereafter elected.

By Mr. CREAMER—Relative to the Board of Revision and Correction of Assessments in New-York, making the acts of a majority valid.

By Mr. MURPHY—To incorporate the City Safe Deposit Company of Brooklyn.

By Mr. O'DONNELL—Amending the School law of the State; appropriating $18,000 out of the literature or deposit fund for the education of teachers, ($10 for each,) under the direction of regents.

By Mr. GRAHAM—To amend the law relative to the admeasurement of dower.

By Mr. EDWARDS—To amend the charter of the Brooklyn and Jamaica Railroad.

BILLS PASSED.

To incorporate the General Synod of the Reformed Dutch Church. To correct taxes in Brooklyn. Relating to the improvement of Third-street. To authorize the Boards of Supervisors to employ stenographers for County Courts. To amend the charter of the New-York and Long Island Bridge Company. To amend the charter of the West Side Savings Bank.

BILLS ORDERED TO A THIRD READING.

To regulate and restrict the organization of savings banks.

Reorganizing the Board of Water and Sewerage Commissioners of Brooklyn.

The Senate then adjourned.

ASSEMBLY.

The Speaker presented the annual report of the Commissioners of Harlem Bridge.

BILLS PASSED.

To amend the law relative to illegal taxation in Herkimer, Otsego, Chenango, Madison, Onondaga and Saratoga Counties.

Repealing the law relative to the inspection of steam boilers, except in the Metropolitan Police District.

To incorporate the Metropolitan Guarantee and Indemnity Company.

To authorize the Commissioners of Public Charities to establish an industrial school on Hart's Island.

To extend the boundaries of the village of Geddes.

Amending the charter of New-York so that the charter elections will be held at the same time as the general election, claiming to be a saving of $150,000.

Establishing a public drive and promenade on Fourth-avenue, Brooklyn.

The Assembly took a recess.

EVENING SESSION.

The special order, the consideration of Mr. MITCHELL'S substitute to the bill amending the Metropolitan Excise law, was taken up. The substitute was favored, in speeches, by Messrs. PLUNKETT, HARTMAN, MITCHELL and HITCHMAN. Mr. BAMLER, of Erie, moved to amend by striking out the word beer in in all sections of the bill wherever it may occur, and insert "nothing herein contained, nor in the act hereby amended, or in any statute of this State in relation to the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be construed or held to include lager-beer." Carried.

Mr. HITCHMAN offered the following amendment: "No arrest for violation of the laws, growing out of the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Metropolitan District shall be made, except upon a warrant issued by a Judge of competent jurisdiction." Lost, 42 to 60.

Mr. P. MITCHELL offered an amendment that the excise moneys in the Counties of Queens and Richmond be devoted to school purposes. Adopted. Also, that where a ball is taking place, permits may be given to the nearest liquor shop to keep open one night. Adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading.

Mr. SELKREG, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported a bill imposing on stock brokers a tax of one-twentieth of one per cent. on the par value of all sales or contracts for sales made by them.

BILLS ORDERED TO A THIRD READING.

Relative to proceeding for admeasurement of dower; allowing Judges of the Third Judicial District traveling fees and clerk hire. Progressed after debate.

BILLS PASSED.

Authorizing certain towns to build a railroad from Monticello to Port Jervis.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

By Mr. LA BAU—Empowering the Board of Supervisors to change the location of the Court-house, Clerks' offices, Surrogate's and other public buildings.

By Mr. JACOBS—Authorizing the Comptroller of Brooklyn to issue registered bonds.

By Mr. JACOBS—Authorizing the County of Kings to borrow money to build additional almshouses.

Adjourned.

CUBA.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP MORRO CASTLE.

The steamship Morro Castle, from Havana March 27, reached this port last evening. Purser R. W. ALBERT has our thanks for courtesies.

The Capture of the Fanny Lowell—Proclamation by General Dulce—The Seizure by the Revolutionists of the Comanditario—Miscellaneous War News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, March 27, 1869.

When the Bienville steamed out of the harbor on Wednesday evening carrying my letter containing an account of the seizure of the Fanny Lowell by the Spanish gunboat Andalusia, the lookout on the Morro signaled two Spanish men-of-war with a prize in tow, the vessels proving to be the Blasco de Garray having the Fanny Lowell in tow, and the gunboat Guadiana. The apparent mystery was soon explained, the Andalusia having transferred her prize to the Garray at Nuevitas, and returned immediately to Ragged Island to watch the movements of the Peruvian monitor and the Cubans, which had left the Fanny Lowell to avoid capture on board, and who, according to the statement of one of the officers of the Andalusia, were in a sorry plight for want of food and clothing. The Spanish but unofficial account of the capture of the Lowell, varies very much from that published by the Nassau Herald, as it claims that at the time of capture the vessel was under way, fully nine miles from Ragged Island, and consequently in neutral waters; also, that the brig did not leave her anchorage in order to go to a more secure harbor, but ran alongside of the Peruvian monitor for protection, and that the Captain of the Andalusia, in nowise intimidated by this proceeding, steamed between the monitor and the brig, and compelled the latter to heave to, after which he sent the pilot of the brig on shore, retaining the remaining members of the crew, four in number. This rambling and disjointed statement may be true, but I, together with many intelligent persons, incline to the belief that the captain of the Andalusia captured the brig in English waters on purpose, in order to prevent the insurgents from receiving the supplies which they need so much, and which would enable them to war successfully with the Spaniards.

Within a few days the Department at Washington and the Secretary of Foreign Affairs in England will undoubtedly be fully posted on this subject, and then the truth will come out. The Havana papers have already shown the course they intend to pursue, by informing their readers that the brig was taken near La Guanaja, and that she was called the Mary Long. I am inclined to believe that she went near the Cuban coast, when brought there by the Spanish gunboat, and that the Spaniards will be compelled to return her intact and with heavy damages to the place whence she was taken. Blockade-running in general is carried on quite merrily, but the Government takes the greatest care that the fact shall not become known among its loyal and disloyal subjects. That the affair has assumed large and, to the Spaniards, dangerous proportions, may be gathered from the following proclamation of General DULCE, and which is quite in keeping with the "more blood" theory inaugurated some time ago, and made a fixed institution by the close union entered into by DULCE and the volunteers.

PROCLAMATION.

Ships which may be captured in Spanish waters or on the high seas near this island having on board persons, arms, ammunitions, or war material which can in any manner contribute to the fomentation of the insurrection in this Province, no matter whence its point of departure or port of procedure, (after an examination of the ship's papers,) shall be considered hostile to the territorial integrity and be treated as pirates according to the rules and ordinances of the navy laid down in such cases. The persons who may be apprehended in such vessels shall, irrespective of the number found, be shot immediately. DOMINGO DULCE.

HAVANA, March 24, 1869.

This document is refreshing, and a little more severe on blockade-runners than the United States ever during the civil war. There is little doubt but the proclamation will be carried out to the letter.

The first fruit of this proclamation, but with a contrary application, has been the capture of steamer Comanditario by a few Cubans who took passage here, three of them having been discharged from the Havana jails, where they had been confined as political prisoners. The Comanditario is a screw steamer of about 400 tons, and was engaged in making regular trips between this port and Cardenas, for which latter port she left on Tuesday last, and where she ought to have arrived on Wednesday morning. At 2 o'clock on Tuesday night, when all the passengers were asleep, a man appeared in the pilot-house, and presenting a revolver to the pilot, coolly proceeded to tie and gag him, after which he delivered the helm to a bystander, who undoubtedly was a seaman, as he changed the vessel's course immediately and to north north east. The Captain and mate were seized in a like manner, and on Wednesday at noon the Comanditario arrived at Cayo Roque or Roque's Keys, where a lighthouse is established. The captain and such of the passengers as were not in the plot were set ashore, after which the steamer went to sea again, some supposing her en route for Ragged Island and others for Nassau. A Spanish man-of-war passing there on Friday brought the passengers and crew to Cardenas. The other steamers now running to coast ports take about twenty-five volunteers on board to guard against suprises.

WAR NEWS.

MR. TAMAYO, one of the Peace Commissioners sent to the insurgents by General DULCE, has written a letter to Mr. CORREA, another one of the Commissioners, with reference to the letter of Mr. JOSE DE ARMAS, Cespedes. It is dated at Sta. de Cuba, March 18th, and takes pretty much the same ground as the letter of Mr. CORREA, before referred to. He agrees with his friend and fellow associate, CORREA, that public judgment should be suspended as to the conduct of ARMAS, until he (ARMAS) shall have confessed or denied the authority of this document. However, if it shall turn out to have been written by ARMAS, he says that it "is confession of having traitorously responded to the confidence with which an honorable man, General DULCE, had shown him."

The Diario has an article in its issue of March 24 in which it is admitted that traveling between Puerto Principe and Nuevitas is somewhat subject to interruption. It says, however, that General LESCA had sent out some columns to open communication, but up to the time they had last been heard from no enemies had been encountered. "To secure," says this journal, "the pacification of Camaguey it is indispensable that more troops should go there, as those now under the orders of Government are not sufficient in number to keep a territory so vast in order.

A letter from Puerto Principe is referred to in the same issue of the Diario. This speaks of the condition of things in that city; says that matters have materially improved there, but adds that provisions are scarce.

A letter has been received in the city from a mercantile house in Manzanilla to the effect that BALMASEDA had met the enemy a few days before, that he was whipped, and that he had burnt the towns of Guisa and Jiguani. This account is said to come from a Spanish firm.

The Prensa of March 25, reports a fight as having taken place near Sibanaca, between the Spaniards and QUESADA'S forces. The latter were intrenched. It is claimed that fifty were killed and many wounded on the part of the rebels, and that four of the Spaniards were killed and three wounded.

The following notice is printed in the Puerto Principe papers:

HEADQUARTERS OF CHIEF OF POLICE } AT PUERTO PRINCIPE.

Notice having reached this office that the self-styled Mexican General, D. MANUEL DE QUESADA Y LOINAZ, a native of this city, sentenced in the year 1855 to three years' imprisonment for robbery and forgery, is now in this department. All employes, and those connected in any way with the Police, are charged to use all means in their power to the end that said D. MANUEL QUESADA Y LOINAZ be apprehended and handed over to the Chief of Police, without this, however, interfering with the right of the accused to come forward and be heard according to law. MANUEL MARIA DE ANDUIZA.

PUERTO PRINCIPE, Feb. 22, 1869.

The Cubans deny the burning, by General QUESADA, of the several places heretofore alluded to.

Some passengers who have just reached Havana, report that 700 men left Puerto Principe on March 16 for Santa Cruz, for the purpose of conveying provisions and supplies back to the former city. They moved in a southwesterly direction. On March 18, in the afternoon, a skirmish took place between them and the enemy, which lasted from 4 to about 7 P. M. The fight was renewed the next morning (March 19) at 5 A. M., and ended between 9 and 10 A. M. The Cuban account is that the Spaniards lost one hundred and ten men, while they had only two killed negroes) and six wounded. The advantage of position was enjoyed by the rebels, who were well protected by trees and bushes. The Government troops, however, marched on and, it is supposed, had reached Santa Cruz.

Private letters, received here from Cardenas, state that two Cubans, respectable persons of that place, were murdered in cold blood by the volunteers on March 15. QUASIMODO.

THE PHILADELPHIA HORROR.

A Man Kills His Wife, Son and Daughter with an Ax, and Drowns Himself in the Delaware—Full Details of the Appalling Tragedy.

From the Philadelphia Ledger, March 31.

One of the most horrible domestic tragedies that has ever taken place in this city was brought to light yesterday afternoon. A mother and her two children were discovered to have been murdered by the husband and father, JAMES L. BLACKSTONE, of the firm of FUNSTON & BLACKSTONE, picture-frame makers at No. 912 Market-street. The family resided at No. 815 Judson-street. The horrible tragedy, which evidently took place early on Sunday morning, was revealed through the following telegraphic dispatch by Mr. FUNSTON:

Have received letter from JAMES that wife and children are killed. Telegraph immediately. (Signed,) ZELAH LEA.

MARCH 30, 1869.

Mr. FUNSTON, immediately on receipt of the above, went to his partner's residence, and, being unable to obtain admission to the house, visited the police station at Twenty-third and Brown-streets, and after informing the officers of the dispatch he had received, requested assistance. The police got over the fence into the yard and, entering the house by the kitchen window, which was open, discovered the bodies of Mrs. BLACKSTONE and her children lying upon the floor, their heads and parts of their clothing covered with blood. The floor was also covered, and the flow of blood was stopped from running into the yard by a roll of muslin, which had been placed in front of the door, as if purposely intended to keep all evidences of the crime within the room. Mrs. BLACKSTONE lay at full length on her back, in the middle of the floor. Resting against her knee lay her son, with his face to the floor, while the daughter lay with her head upon his shoulder, both in their night clothes, and all having evidently been killed a number of hours. An examination of the body of Mrs. BLACKSTONE disclosed that the wounds were made by the sharp part of an ax. There was a gash through the middle of the chin, extending to the right and downward four inches, and two and a half inches deep, severing the root of the tongue, jaw-bone, &c.; immediately below this, on the throat was another gash, four inches in length, dividing the windpipe and gullet, and reaching the spinal column; there was another but very slight cut on the lower portion of the neck; on the head, back of and above the left ear was a very severe contused wound; above the right ear, on the back of the head, was a wound one and a half inches long; directly behind the head was a triangular wound, made by the corner of the blunt part of the ax; the bone was depressed and fractured; on the right cheek there was also a slight contused wound. The other portions of the body bore no marks of violence.

The body of the little girl was next examined. On the upper part of the right side of the forehead a blow had been given with the head of the ax that had broken through the skin, crushed the bone in pieces down upon the brain, and driven one piece through the skin on the left side of the forehead; on the other side of the front part of the head was another contused wound of a similar character; there was a wound near the right eye, and another near the left temple; the head, back as well as front, was crushed almost to a jelly; no other wounds were discovered.

The boy had been struck with the butt of the ax upon the right temple and the bone fractured. At the back and top of the head the skull was fractured, and a wound discovered two and a half inches long. On the left side, over the ear, was a wound an inch long. Back of and a little above that wound was another, one and a half inches long. Behind the left ear the skull was also fractured. On the right side of the neck there was a gash, evidently made by two chops with the edge of the ax, three inches in length, cutting off a piece of the jaw-bone and severing the jugular vein.

All the circumstances indicate that the wife and one of the children were murdered in the kitchen, and the other child as it lay on the lounge in the sitting or dining-room. A pillow on the lounge was covered with blood, and the carpet was saturated with blood underneath. The wounds indicated a state of frenzy on the part of the murderer, as the heads were nearly severed from the bodies. And yet nothing else on the premises betokened a diseased mind. Everything was in order so far as could be expected in a house in which the family had arisen but a short time before.

So far as could be ascertained, Mr. BLACKSTONE was a temperate man, and seemed to live happily with his wife. What led him to murder his wife and children is not known, but it is charitably supposed that he was not of sound mind. The wife had only a few weeks previously told a friend that insanity was hereditary in her husband's family. After committing the murders, BLACKSTONE wrote a letter to his father-in-law in Connecticut, informing him of what he had done; then came down to the city, visited the office of a real estate broker, made an assignment of some property, and then walked to the Delaware, intent upon putting an end to himself. When at Third and Market, he was seen by one of the officers of the Sixth Ward behaving in a singular manner, and supposing him to be insane he arrested him, but he broke away, and continued toward the river. Upon reaching Chestnut-street wharf he pulled off his coat and hat, threw them overboard, and jumped after them. Police Officer ODENHEIMER got the articles out, and in examining the pockets of the coat found a handkerchief, on which the name of BLACKSTONE was written. The body was recovered yesterday.

From the record of births and marriages in the family bible, it was discovered that JAMES L. BLACKSTONE was born Aug. 24, 1832, and Mrs. BLACKSTONE Dec. 2, 1835; they were married Aug. 20, 1857; their boy, LEE BLACKSTONE, was born April 16, 1861, and the daughter, CATHARINE, Jan. 23, 1866. This would make the husband 37 years and the wife 34 years old, the oldest child 8 years and the youngest 3 years old. The oldest was in quite delicate health, and was under the care of a physician; the youngest was well and a very pretty, interesting girl.

We learn from Mr. FUNSTON, the partner, that BLACKSTONE formerly resided on a farm at Bramford, Conn., but that about fourteen months ago he sold his place, came to Philadelphia, and with the proceeds entered into partnership with him. Recently trouble has been experienced with a book-keeper, whose accounts were kept very incorrectly. This apparently weighed upon the mind of BLACKSTONE, as he has been very much depressed by fear of incurring pecuniary loss therefrom. He saw BLACKSTONE last on Saturday, when he left the store about 6:15 o'clock, in a very melancholy mood.

It is alleged that both Mr. and Mrs. BLACKSTONE had bank accounts, and that he was in possession of some property. He was kind to his wife and children, and of a quiet disposition. Although not a member, he generally attended the Central Congregational Church, and was seen there on the Sabbath about three weeks ago, with his whole family.

Commissioners of Emigration.

The Commissioners of Emigration held their fortnightly session last evening at the Society Library.

A communication from the Commissioners of Public Charities and Corrections was received in regard to an exchange of land on Ward's Island. Referred to the Ward's Island Committee, with power to act. Mr. KAPP spoke concerning the meeting of railroad agents to take place during this month in order to arrange the Summer time-tables, and offered a resolution that the Railroad Committee be requested to call their attention to the importance of better accommodation and speedier transportation of emigrant trains to the West, and to insist on a reform of the present system, which is detrimental to the health of emigrants, besides being almost as expensive as a first-class passage. This resolution was referred to the Railroad Committee.

A resolution was also passed to transfer the destitute passengers of the ship James Foster to Ward's Island. No report was rendered in reference to the testimony received by the Committee of the Commissioners regarding the short provisions and brutal treatment upon that vessel.

An adjournment took place till the 14th April, at Castle Gardeu, at 2:30 o'clock.

Twice Robbed at Weehawken.

A case of robbery, restitution and rerobbery occurred last week at Weehawken. The individual mulcted is a man named JOSEPH TIERNAN, of Union Township, who appeared yesterday morning before Judge WHITE, of Hoboken, and complained that he had been robbed of $80 by MARTIN COLLINS, keeper of a liquor store at Weehawken. In his affidavit TIERNAN says that on the 20th inst. he had in his possession $82, with which he went into COLLINS' store and had some drink. He got tipsy and fell asleep in the ferry-house of the Weekawken Ferry Company, and on waking up found he was minus his money. From information given by JOHN EVANS, he went next day (Sunday) to the liquor store, whereupon COLLINS handed him $81, $1 of which was paid back for drink. A second time TIERNAN got drunk in the house, and on waking in the afternoon found his money gone. The proprietor of the house having denied all knowledge of it, TIERNAN made an affidavit, reciting the facts above mentioned, asserting that he believed COLLINS and others had robbed him and asking for a warrant for their arrest. The Judge issued the warrant and placed it in the hands of Constable BROWN for execution.

Ex-Mayor Harper—Meeting of the Employes of Harper & Brothers.

A meeting of the employes of Messrs. HARPER & BROTHERS was held yesterday afternoon, Mr. HENRY MARSH presiding, and GEORGE A. DOUGHERTY acting as Secretary, to express their grief for the death of Mr. JAMES HARPER, and their sympathy with the bereaved family. Mr. MARSH opened the meeting with a few appropriate remarks. H. M. ALDEN, the editor of Harper's Weekly, and A. H. GUERNSEY, editor of Harper's Magazine, also spoke in connection with the objects of the meeting, after which resolutions were adopted expressing the sorrow and regret felt at the decease of Mr. HARPER, and tendering to his immediate family, and to the surviving brothers of the firm, heartfelt sympathy for their irreparable loss.

Celebration at Dr. Chapin's Church.

The annual celebration of the Sunday School of the Church of the Divine Paternity, better known as Dr. CHAPIN'S, took place last evening before a very crowded audience. At the commencement, a voluntary on the organ was performed by Mr. C. A. MUNGER, followed by an opening address by Miss MARY E. GRIFFITHS. Dialogues, songs, declamations, stories and recitations then took place, all of which were well selected and well rendered. Miss ANNIE G. BULLWINKLE performed a piano solo, and Miss NEWBOULD, the young soprano of the church choir, sang an aria by STIGELLI. She also sung in a burlesque play entitled "Church Music in 1899."

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

New-York.

On Tuesday DENNIS FLEMING, a carman, proceeded to the foot of Chambers-street, North River, to get a load of leather, when another man drove up and ordered FLEMING to get out of his way. FLEMING declined to do so until he had obtained a load. JAMES BARNES, a dock hand in the employ of the Erie Railway Company, interfered and assaulted FLEMING with a handspike, and dealt him such a blow on the head as reduced him to a state of insensibility. BARNES was arrested and discharged by Justice DOWLING, owing to a misstatement of the facts. FLEMING was carried home to No. 14 Ridge-street, where he remains in a critical condition.

Coroner KEENAN took cognizance yesterday of the case of GEO. W. CONKLIN, the man who was drowned the night previous, as already reported. It appears that when the deceased fell into the creek he called for help, when his wife ran to his assistance. He told her to get a cotton hook and throw him a rope. In a few moments CONKLIN called out, "Never mind, MARY, I'm going. Good bye, take care of the children." He then sank beneath the surface.

LOUISA WEINSCHEIMER, a child two and a half years of age, and living at No. 207 West Thirty-fifth-street, was run over last evening in Thirty-fifth-street, near Eighth-avenue, by a wagon in charge of JOSEPH NEUMANN, and was instantly killed. NEIMANN was arrested and locked up in the Twentieth Precinct Station-house, to await the result of an inquest which will be held by Coroner KEENAN this morning.

The first annual banquet of the Geo. T. Trimble Association took place at the Astor House last evening. JOHN V. HARRIOTT presided, and addresses were made by Messrs. HOSMER, TOOKER, KIRBY, GALLAHER, LARRAMORE, S. A. KIRBY, BEERS, ADAMS, and BOESE.]

The Myrtle Coterie, a pleasure organization, gave its first social party last night at Trenor's Lyric Hall in Sixth-avenue. There was a large attendance, fine music, much beauty and great enjoyment.

The question of reconciliation between the Typographical Union and the employing printers yet remains undecided. Several meetings have taken place of late between committees from each body, but no complete understanding has been arrived at. It is to be hoped that an arrangement may soon be effected.

An unknown man, apparently about 70 years of age, wearing a black coat and Kossuth hat, entered car No. 116 of the Belt Line yesterday, at Thirty-ninth-street, and died soon after.

Hon. Mr. CAULDWELL, Senator from Westchester County, was reelected Supervisor of Morrisania, on Tuesday evening, for the thirteenth time.

PAUL DU CHAILLU will lecture on "Adventures in the Cannibal Country" this evening at 8 o'clock, in the church corner of Lexington-avenue and Forty-sixth-street.

In a description of the Cornell Reading-room, which was recently published, we inadvertently said that this excellent enterprise was commenced and supported by Mr. W. W. CORNELL, the President of the City Sunday School and Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of this City. The credit really belongs to Mr. ROBERT KEYSER, Mr. CORNELL'S son-in-law.

The steamer New Champion commenced her regular trips for Catskill yesterday. The Thomas Powell commences her trips to-day.

A sale of unclaimed plunder was held at the Central Police office yesterday morning. The prices realized were good, and in most cases exceeded the value of the articles.

There will be a public meeting this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Madison-avenue Church, corner Thirty-first-street, for the purpose of establishing a home for the aged and infirm of the Baptist denomination.

SAMUEL WILSON, of No. 70 Third-avenue, last evening fell down the basement stairs at his residence, and dislocated his knee pan. He was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The market yesterday was perhaps scarcely as firm as on Tuesday, yet it was considerably better than on the previous days. There were present many persons who evidently came for information, who were perhaps not quite prepared to buy, but who were looking for chances for investment. The entire absence of the speculative element was everywhere noticeable, and the salesroom presented a sober, solid appearance. Of course, after the serious decline of last week it will take some days for the market to rally and become even reasonably firm, but the indications now are that it will speedily recover, and again gain the confidence of honest men.

One idea is yet to be corrected. Persons offering property for sale seem to ignore the recent changes and to expect as high prices as when the excitement was at its height. They cannot reconcile themselves to the belief that the time for obtaining outrageous prices has passed, and that for the future they must be content to receive about what their property is worth. They accordingly instruct the auctioneer that unless a certain price, always too great, is reached, they will not let the property go. The result is—no sale. This is an error which will in time correct itself. Meantime the public must be content to see a few pieces of property knocked down, but not sold, and they can afford to let such pieces pass. Others equally desirable will be offered without restrictions, and quite enough of this class will be offered to supply the legitimate demand.

The regular attendants anticipate a better day to-day than yesterday, and the supposition seems quite a fair one. The sales are varied, and embrace several pieces of really valuable property.

The sales for to-day are as follows: Messrs. MULLER, WILKINS & Co. will sell the two-story and attic frame house and lot No. 139 Forsyth-street, the four-story brick house and lot No. 14 Duane-street, the two-story and attic brick house and lot No. 16 Christopher-street, the two-story and attic brick house No. 16 Gay-street, the two a half story brick house and lot No. 70 Grand-street, also several pieces of up-town improved and unimproved property and the three-story and basement store and dwelling No. 69 Sackett-street, Brooklyn.

Messrs. BLEECKER, SON & Co., will sell the valuable property, Nos. 25 and 27 Chatham-street, premises No. 156 Water-street. The three-story brick house and lot No. 46 Third-avenue, lots on Eleventh-avenue and at Hunter's Point, and several pieces of property on Hudson, Worth and Goerck streets.

Mr. JAMES M. MILLER will sell several pieces of up-town and Brooklyn property.

Messrs. WYCKOFF & LITTLE have a sale of 111 lots in Brooklyn-avenue, Furnald and Wesler streets, near Prospect Park and East New-York-avenue, Brooklyn.

Mr. D. M. SEAMAN will sell the two-story brick house and lot, No. 232 Madison-street.

1869.—FIRST TRIP FOR ROUNDOUT, Poughkeepsie, Newburg, Cozzens and intermediate landings. The steam

[illegible] the article of salt, concerning the advances in the price of which, and the extent to which such advance imposed a tax upon the people, there has been even more discussion than in the case of flour. The new evidence under this head, to which I would ask attention, is no less interesting than important.

On the 12th of February a meeting was held at the rooms of Hon. JOHN W. FORNEY, in the City of Washington, for the purpose of consulting about "the proper means to be employed for the development of the South," at which meeting there were present Hons. W. D. KELLEY, J. K. MOORHEAD, HENRY L. CAKE, and others. Among the speakers was Hon. JOHN POOL, United States Senator from North Carolina, who gave an interesting account of the fisheries on the coast of that State. He stated that "the average catch of herring during the season—i. e., from the 1st of March until the middle of May—was about 70,000 or 80,000, and about 300 ahead; but frequently as high as 180,000 herring, and sometimes 300,000 herring and 1,000 shad are captured at a single haul. These are packed in barrels and transported sometimes to Philadelphia, but more frequently to Baltimore." "The fishing in these waters," continued Mr. POOL, "is a matter of great importance since the war, although it is scarcely attended with as much profit as prior to that period. This is accounted for by the fact that labor commands higher wages, and the cost of twine and salt has been largely increased. Salt, which could be bought for 18 and 20 cents before the war, now costs from 60 to 70 cents a bushel, and twine has risen in the same proportion. Turk's Island salt, from the West Indies, is indispensable for curing the fish properly."

The next item of evidence, bearing upon the question at issue, to which I would ask your attention, is in respect to the subject of rents. Since the publication of your speech, a prominent real estate agent in Philadelphia has kindly furnished me with a table showing the comparative rents and valuation of houses in 1860 and 1869 in the Fourth District of Pennsylvania now represented by you in Congress. The table embraces a list of twenty-six houses, nearly all low-priced dwellings valued in 1860 at $2,600 and under, and rented at that time, mainly to laboring men, at from $8 to $16 per month. The following abstract of the table clearly exhibits the advance in the rents of these same houses since 1860:

	Aggregate rent per month.		Increase.	Inc'e per cent.
	1870.	1869.
Five houses, (1 at $8, 2 at $9, 2 at $10,) renting at	$46 00	$162 00	$56 00	121.74
Seven houses, (1 at $11, 5 at $12, 1 at $14,) renting at	85 00	190 00	105 00	123.53
Nine houses, (2 at $15, 5 at $16, 2 at $16 67,) renting at	143 34	325 00	181 67	126.74
Five houses, (1 at $18, 2 at $20, 2 at $25,) renting at	108 00	265 00	157 00	145.37
Twenty-six houses	$382 34	$682 00	$499 67	130.69

It will therefore appear, from an inspection of this table, that those houses which rented at the lowest rate, and as such were occupied by ordinary mechanics and laborers, who constitute the bulk of the population of a great city, exhibit an average increase of rents of over 130 per cent. in 1869, as compared with 1860; while only in a single case, viz., that of the poorest tenement, which rented for $8 per month in 1860 and at $16 per month in 1869, was the increase less than 100 per cent. On the other hand, the advance in those more expensive houses was still greater, averaging over 135 per cent.; one having advanced from $20 to $50 per month, another from $25 to $60, and a third from $25 to $75. Taking the whole list, which is said to represent fairly the rental value of the houses of the laboring classes of your district, the general advance in rents was over 130 (130.69) per cent. in 1869, as compared with the rents paid for the same tenements in 1860.

The official report of the "Guardians of the Poor" in the City of Philadelphia seems to afford another complete demonstration of your want of acquaintance with the topics on which you have seemed to speak with authority. Thus, for example, you will find, by referring to their report submitted in 1868, page 25, that the apparent increase in the price of the following supplies, viz.: beef, mutton, coffee, tea, rice, flour, brown and white sugar, molasses, and dry goods, purchased by the poor in the year 1867, over the price paid for similar supplies in 1860, was 113½ per cent., or making allowance for the varying proportion of articles consumed, 95 per cent. It should also be borne in mind that this percentage represents the increase in what may be presumed to be the cheapest and most ordinary forms of the above commodities, purchased for the almshouses at wholesale, and in large quantities.

It is well known that day-labor employed by the United States Government is paid at the highest rates of the trade and class to which it belongs, and yet the comparative prices paid to skilled workmen employed on the "Treasury Extension," Washington, in 1861 and 1868, show that the wages of these persons have increased on an average only 58½ per cent.

In the Merrimack Manufacturing Company, the average advance in the wages paid in 1868-9, in the "carding" department, omitting overseers, was 60 per cent.; in the "spinning" department, 52 per cent.; in the "dressing" department, 75 per cent.; in the "weaving" department, 83 per cent. In the repair shop of the same corporation the average advance in the wages of mechanics was 63 per cent.; of overseers in all the departments, 56 per cent.

In different branches of mechanical industry, in the City of Lowell, the advance in the wages of machinists, carpenters and blacksmiths was 50 per cent.; of stone cutters, 100 per cent., and of stone and brick masons, 75 per cent., while the advance in the price of the leading articles of domestic consumption, in the cities of Lowell and Lawrence, for the years 1868-9, over 1860, (making no allowance for the varying ratios of quantities used,) is somewhat less than fifty (91.63) per cent., but if the average be proportioned to the relative importance of the several articles entering into consumption—the quantity and value of flour and meat consumed, for example, being disproportionate to the quantity of sugar, coffee and firewood—the advance would be found to stand at even a much higher figure.

The individual experiences of workmen throughout the country, as represented in letters received from them, support this position fully. In one of these communications the writer says:

"My weekly expenses ten years ago, exclusive of fuel and rent, amounted to $2 01; the same articles to-day cost me $3 07, general average, 97 per cent. Wages in 1859, $10 per week; in 1869, $12; advance, 20 per cent. In round numbers, then, my expenses per month in 1859 were $40 (income $40); balance for clothing and incidentals, $32 50, or $390 per annum for five of us. My expenses now are $52 76 per month, or more than 100 per cent. advance, leaving me but $4 25 per month, or about $51 per year for clothing and incidentals."

The evidence respecting the condition of the working people in the large cities of the eastern section of our country, receives the full indorsement of Mr. HORACE GREELEY. Thus, in a recent published communication on the condition of labor in New-York, Mr. GREELEY says:

"The supposed excess of wages in cities is fallacious and misleading. The inevitable cost of living in cities, especially this one, is far higher than is or well can be realized in the country. A family of four persons can hardly live decently in less than three rooms, and the rent of three rooms tolerable for such a family is the entire wages of an average mechanic in the country. When everything eaten, drank, (except water,) or worn, must be bought piecemeal at high prices, the cost of living becomes enormous, and saving by men of family very difficult. Our mechanics who are single and have only themselves to support, ought to deposit at least a third of their wages in some savings bank each pay-day, though very few of them do so. They might save, but they do not; those who have families to support rarely do better than to pay their way. Only very able, very energetic, or very frugal persons save money in a great city."

It is curious to note here the close correspondence between these conclusions of Mr. GREELEY and what he had previously called the jaggled statements of the Commissioner on the same subject, which latter read as follows:

"The single man or woman, working for his or her support alone, is in the receipt of a rate of wages from which savings may be made equal, or greater than ever before. Unmarried operatives, therefore, gain; while those who are obliged to support their own families in hired tenements lose."

EXPERIENCE OF THE COUNTRY.

It will be observed that the above evidence relative to the comparative prices of wages and commodities is based upon the record of experience in large cities mainly. To prove, however, that the condition of affairs is the same in the sparsely populated districts of the eastern sections of the country, the detailed results of an investigation recently instituted in the town of North Brookfield, Mass., are herewith submitted. This town, situated in the central portion of the State, and at a distance from any railroad or dense centre of population, is the seat of a somewhat extensive boot and shoe industry, employing about a thousand hands, male and female, and constituting, apart from agriculture, the main dependence for occupation to the local population. The investigation was made for the purpose of testing the conclusions of the Commissioner, by a well-known citizen of the town, Hon. ANDREW WALKER, whose name is a sufficient guarantee for the entire fairness and accuracy of the statements.

The rates of labor were obtained from direct inquiry of the largest boot and shoe manufacturing concern in the State, and the prices of commodities were ascertained by a personal examination of the books of one of the principal dealers.

The result of the inquiry by Mr. WALKER demonstrates that while the average advance in the price of labor between the years 1860 and 1868 was less than 23 per cent., the advance in the cost of the commonest necessaries of life was nearly 90 per cent. Rents in North Brookfield have greatly increased, but to what precise extent cannot be so readily ascertained as in the case of commodities. The advance cannot be less than about 65 per cent.

Fuel has advanced—say, wood from $5 to $7 per cord, coal from $7 to $12 per ton—an average of about 60 per cent.

A recent report of the Oneida Community of New-York shows a constant increase in the cost of living for several years, until for the past year (1868) it averaged $8 34 per week for the simple raw material required for each person. In this Community, all supplies are raised on the ground, as well as the material for all clothing, are purchased in quantities at wholesale prices, thus affecting a considerable saving over the above what is generally practicable among individuals not thus associated. In the Connecticut branch of the Community the average weekly expense of each individual was $4 85. It does not appear, furthermore, that the Community people live any more generously, or have any more of the refinements and elegances of life, than the great mass of the people in New-York and New-England ten years ago.

Let us now apply the lesson of this experience. On an average, every American workingman who is married may be supposed to support four persons besides himself. Supposing the cost to be the same as in the Community—and it probably must be more, under retail prices, to secure the same degree of comfort—it will require nearly $32 (just $31 50) per week. It is a pertinent question—How large a proportion of American workmen earn that amount? How many do not obtain more than two-thirds as much?

The Commissioner, from an inability to obtain sufficient reliable evidence, did not claim in his report, that the conclusions arrived at in respect to prices and the condition of labor throughout the Eastern and Middle States, applied equally and coextensively at the West. So far, however, as such evidence has been furnished, it tends to show that like causes have everywhere tended to produce like effects.

COMPARATIVE DEMAND FOR LABOR IN 1860 AND 1869.

But I am well aware that you will endeavor to answer this new evidence, as you answered the evidence presented in the report, by the assertion that labor is immeasurably better employed at the present time than it was in 1860. This answer, however, is far more specious than correct. The war, by the diversion of large numbers of men to the army, created in many departments of industry a deficiency of skilled workmen, which has not to this day been fully supplied. If, therefore, certain specialties of industry in certain sections were taken as the standard, it might be made to appear that labor is more fully employed in 1869 than it was in 1860. There has been, furthermore, a large increase in what may be termed manufacturing production since 1860, as well as a large increase of population; consequently, the specific number of laborers of all kinds employed throughout the Northern States is unquestionably much larger than 1860. But that labor, considered generally, is "better employed," "is now immeasurably more fully employed" than in 1859 and in 1860, is an assertion not supported by any sufficient evidence, the two latter years having been, not as represented by you, among "the darkest periods ever seen by the laboring people of America," but really the two most prosperous years that the nation has ever experienced. Under this head I propose to submit some evidence.

The report of the Guardians of the Poor of the City of Philadelphia shows that the net amount expended under their direction was $298,789 for the year 1855; $259,445 for 1859; $230,517 for 1860; and $425,868 for 1867. The number of persons reported as receiving outdoor relief in the City of Philadelphia, for the year 1868, was 104,542, as compared with 85,282 for the year 1867. The present population of Philadelphia may be estimated at about 750,000; of this number, 3,718 were inmates of the Almshouse on the 1st of January, 1869, and, as before shown, 104,542 persons received relief on account of poverty during the year. It therefore appears that during the year 1868, 108,260 (or one person out of every 14½ in the City of Philadelphia) were wholly or partially incapable of self-support;—a circumstance that does not tell strongly in favor of a great material prosperity on the part of the people!

All accounts, furthermore, agree that in the City of New-York the number of persons seeking employment, and the demands for relief on behalf of the poor, have never been so great as during the past Winter.

Mr. GREELEY, writing on this topic in January last, used the following most significant language:

"I estimate that there are at this moment half a million persons within sight of our City's steeples, who are hungry and destitute, because they or their parents can find nothing to do."

The Secretary of the New-York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, in a report of its operations of 1868, also calls attention to the evidences of increased destitution among all classes of workingmen, including skilled laborers and some professional men. He says:

"Notwithstanding the high wages for labor, the seemingly ample remunerations of industry have failed to put the laboring class in so favorable a position as they possessed before the advance of wages in 1860. The present large wages, compared with those in ante-war times, are consumed by the exorbitant expenses of living, leaving a smaller margin for accumulation than when wages were lower.

This Association has ample demonstration in every day's experience of the truth of the facts set forth in Comptroller WELLS' report in regard to the poor laboring and mechanic classes in this City. The purchasing power of their earnings in many cases, even with full employment, is scarcely equal to their expenses, so that they have little or nothing to save. Hence, when labor slacks or fails, they are brought to suffering and to dependence on charity. This readily explains how it is that so many of the temperate, the frugal, and industrious are brought into straits and need temporary aid, and it shows, moreover, why large demands for relief are required at a time when both the capital and industry of the country are in a broad view tending to resume their wonderful career of progress and development."

From the same authority we also learn that although the past Winter has been exceedingly mild in the City of New-York, the distress has been greater than during the severe Winter of 1867-'68, although the distress during this latter period had never then found a parallel in the experience of any previous years.

Scores of letters recently addressed to the Commissioner by leading manufactures in various sections of the country, furnish further evidence in respect to the relative condition of labor and wages, which can be neither refuted nor ignored. One of the number, written by the Secretary of one of the largest corporations engaged in the manufacture of reapers and mowers in the State of Ohio, reads as follows:

OFFICE OF C. AULTMAN & CO.,
CANTON, Ohio, March 15, 1869.

In no year of our history as manufacturers (which covers the last thirteen years) has labor, both skilled and unskilled, been so abundant as now, and I might say unemployed. The applications are daily and refused by us, simply for the want of place and labor for them, average from fifteen to eighteen per day, and the applicants represent this as the status of things in other manufacturing works of this State. We know it to be true of all establishments in this City. The truth is, our resources are taxed by men asking for means to live until they can get employment, while others offer to work for their board. From present indications this condition of things may continue. I may add that we have enlarged our facilities for manufacturing, so that we employ nearly one hundred more men than ever before. C. AULTMAN & CO.

Additional letters, similar to the one just quoted, were received from the City Point Machine Works of Boston; COLT'S Firearms Manufacturing Company, of Hartford, Conn.; Office of the General Superintendent of the Buffalo and Erie Railroad Company; W. G. ANGELL, President of the American Screw Company; CHICKERING & SONS, piano-forte makers, New-York; JOHN A. GRISWOLD & CO., Troy, N. Y.; JOHN STEPHENSON & CO., car builders, New-York; the Morgan Iron Works, New-York; SMITH & WESSON, firearms manufacturers, Springfield, Mass.; Wheeler and Wilson Sewing Machine Company, New-York, and many other large establishments.

LIFE INSURANCE AND SAVINGS BANKS.

In respect to life insurance, the case is simply this: In 1859-'60 the system was comparatively new, and little understood throughout the country. There were also but few comparatively few companies, and the majority of those were of recent organization. In 1867-'69, however, the system had been found by experience to be so profitable that companies were greatly multiplied—those of New-York alone having increased from eight in 1859 to thirty-four in 1869; while the competition for business has induced the employment of large numbers of agents, who, stimulated to effort by liberal commissions, scour the country in every direction, and by personal appeal and importunity, induce applications for policies. The attempt to deduce any inference from statistics of this character, tending to prove a material change for the better in the condition of the masses of the people during the period under consideration, is therefore on its face an absurdity. As well might you attempt to prove that the ratio of disease and mortality throughout the country had diminished, because of the unexampled sales by traveling agents of certain popular works on remedies and therapeutics. Besides, it seems that of those who take out policies of life insurance in the Eastern States, but a very small proportion belong to that class whose prosperity is the most sure index of the prosperity of the country, viz.: the class that work for day wages.

In like manner the statistics of savings banks are referred to by you at length, as showing a highly prosperous condition of the masses. Properly considered, however, they indicate a very different state of things. Thus the first, and almost the only fact which arrests the attention of a mere superficial observer, in examining these statistics, is a large apparent increase in deposits from 1860 to 1867 or 1868; and this fact you have taken great care shall not be overlooked. But an intelligent examination will at once show that a very great part of the apparent accumulation referred to is mere inflation. For example, let us take the case of Massachusetts, where the conditions for increase may be presumed to be especially favorable:

In 1860 the savings bank deposits in this State were	$45,054,000
In 1867, in currency, $60,431,253, or in gold at 135	50,979,000
Increase in seven years	$14,526,000

Or $4,597,000 less than simple interest (gold) for seven years on the aggregate deposits of 1860; that is to say, the deposits of 1860 were not made good in 1867, if we reckon only their simple natural increase at interest, or, in other words, it has been found that the sum in the possession of the depositors in 1867 (gold value) was far less than would naturally be expected in view of the sum they already had in 1860. It is evident that some cause had eaten into the accumulation which existed seventy years previously, and had occasioned the withdrawal of portions of that accumulation. Of course it is not to be expected that withdrawals would take place, but in an ordinary condition of affairs the new deposits would certainly equal those withdrawals, and in an advancing condition would greatly exceed them. We do not find this to be the case, however, even in Massachusetts, where the savings banks are so [illegible] (the counterbalance withdrawals) had cleared nothing above their living in the years between 1860 and 1867, but had only left their then accumulated earnings untouched, they would have been very much better off than they are found to have been under the compound system of inflation and monopoly—the only kind of compounding which the poor people of this country may expect so long as the policy which you represent shall continue to prevail.

That the state of things noticed in respect to the deposits of the Massachusetts savings banks is entirely abnormal, judging from precedents, is conclusively shown by contrasting the average annual increase from 1850 to 1860 with the average from 1860 to 1867. Thus, from 1850 to 1860 the deposits increased at an average annual rate of 12⅝ per cent., (gold,) while from 1861 to 1867 the annual average was only 8½ per cent. currency, or 4 1-13 per cent. gold. During the years 1859 and 1860, moreover, the very years you have described "as the darkest periods ever seen by the laboring people of America," the deposits in the savings banks—not only of Massachusetts, but of all the other States—increased in a ratio that has almost no precedent in the history of the country.

But I beg of you to observe, further, that if the swelling sum of $60,431,638—the amount of the currency deposits in the savings banks of Massachusetts in 1867—were reduced to the proportions which it truly bears when compared with beef, bread, clothes or rent, which are mainly what a workingman wants money for, it would be found that the workingman's investment in a savings bank, under your régime, was very much like what Mr. JOHNSON wished a capitalist's investment in Government bonds to be, namely, no right to any interest, and a profound sense of thankfulness that even the principal was recoverable at the maturity of the promissory obligation. In order to render this fact perfectly apparent to you, let us subject to analysis the statistics of the savings banks of the State of New-York. By returns furnished me by the Bank Department at Albany, I find that the average per depositor in the New-York savings banks was—

Jan. 1, 1861, gold	$224 00
Jan. 1, 1868, currency	281 00

Let us, now, determine the comparative value of the average currency deposits of 1868, as measured in gold, and also in flour, meats, rents, board and commodities in general—the prices assumed for the latter being those which the evidence already submitted proves to have prevailed through the Eastern States during the years 1867-8:

$281, currency, reduced to gold, (135)	$208
281, currency, reduced to flour rates, (190)	148
281, currency, reduced to rates for meats of all kinds, (185)	151
281, currency, reduced to rents, (166)	169
231, currency, reduced to prices for board, (176)	159
281, currency, reduced to the general average of prices in 1868, (178)	157

If we examine, also, the statistics of savings banks in Philadelphia, the results will prove to be not dissimilar. Thus, according to the returns of the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, the largest institution in that city, we find—

The average per depositor in January, 1861, gold, was	$192 00
The average per depositor in January, 1868, currency	209 00
Same reduced to gold, at 135, (lowest, not average rate)	155 00
Same reduced to flour rates (190)	110 00
Same reduced to rates for meat of all kinds (185)	113 00
Same reduced to rent (166)	128 00
Same reduced to prices for board (176)	119 00
Same reduced to general prices (178)	117 50

Even if the average advance since 1860 in the price of the commodities essential to the existence and comfort of workingmen has been only 50 per cent., as you say, the purchasing power of the average of individual deposits in the savings banks of the State of New-York would be only 187 in 1868 against 224 in 1861, and, for the City of Philadelphia, 140 as compared with 192.

If it be objected that it is not fair in this comparison to reduce currency to gold—or that a dollar is always a dollar—it seems certain that this objection cannot fairly be urged against a comparison of the purchasing power of the money on deposit at different periods in respect to other commodities than the precious metals. Otherwise what comparison, it may be asked, could have been instituted in case the present currency had depreciated to an equal extent with Confederate money? Is the quantity of depreciated money deposited in savings banks to be made the test of the prosperity of the people? If so, then the greater the depreciation the greater the prosperity.

There is one other point which examination of the statistics of the savings banks of Philadelphia reveals, which I commend to your consideration as of special interest. It is, that the increase in the number of depositors from this city has not kept pace with the increase of population. Thus, in the Safety Fund Savings Bank, the increase in the number of depositors from 1860 to 1868 was twenty-seven per cent., while the increase in the population of the city during the same period is estimated to have increased from 565,000 to 750,000, or at the rate of nearly thirty-three per cent.

But interesting and conclusive as are the statements submitted in respect to savings banks, the story is yet but half told. Formerly the deposits in these institutions represented in great part the hard-earned accumulations of persons who were entirely dependent for support upon the wages received for the performance of daily routine labor—such as operatives in factories, day laborers, mechanics, needle women, clerks and small traders. Now, on the contrary, all the evidence tends to show that exactly the contrary condition of affairs has been established. Thus, for example, in the manufacturing City of Lawrence, Mass., with a population of 28,000, of whom 9,000 are operatives directly employed in the mills, 7,568 persons are returned as savings-bank depositors in that place for the year ending October, 1868; but of this number only one-fourth, we are officially informed, were operatives.

In short, the recent increase of savings bank deposits in the Eastern States is chiefly due to the fact that they are more lightly taxed than any other kind of invested property. This is well illustrated by the case of Massachusetts. Till within a year the tax on savings bank deposits in that State was only one-half of one per cent., and, as the investments of these institutions were profitable, being very largely in United States bonds and bank stocks, the depositor received a net increase of seven per cent. without risk or trouble. The consequence was that a new class of people, for whom the savings banks were never designed, and who had no right to avail themselves of their eleemosynary character, began to use them, and to deposit the largest sums which are permitted to draw interest. That amount in Massachusetts is required to be less than $1,000 standing to the credit of one person. But to avoid this, deposits are made in the names of the wife and minor children, until they often amount to several thousand dollars. More palpable violations of the law than this are also resorted to or permitted by some institutions, which, when the depositor's account rises to the legal limit, allowed him to open another, and still another, in his own name, the pass-books being numbered 1, 2 3, &c. The single fact, therefore, of a recent rapid accumulation in the deposits of savings banks "does not, of itself," to use the willingness of the Bank Commissioners of Massachusetts, in their report for 1867, "afford any evidence that they are performing the beneficial work expected of them."

REVIEW OF OTHER POINTS.

The claim you make that a much larger number of houses have been built in Philadelphia and Washington during the year 1868 than in 1860 proves nothing, if true, in respect to the general prosperity; inasmuch as the whole tendency of this present exhibition of affairs is to increase and build up the large cities, in a most unhealthy manner, at the expense of the country; and I would refer you, in contrast, to the large manufacturing town of Bridesburg, adjacent to Philadelphia, in which, I am informed on the highest authority, there has hardly been an instance since 1865 in which a house has been further built for the use of an operative employed in the local establishments.

There is also something of startling significance in the following assertions, which I take from a letter published by General H. K. OLIVER in his recent report (1869) to the Legislature of Massachusetts, "on the employment of children in factories," and which latter the Springfield Republican, an influential journal published in the heart of New-England, indorses "as a tolerably good description of what most of us have seen:"

"Certain parties are called the great manufacturers of New-England, and they have been engaged as such for generations. Every member of the family that has been in their employ, and come out of it with more than enough for a decent interment, is yet to be found."

The general system, as managed in connection with the factory store, is further characterized as producing this result, viz:

"A helpless crowd of workers, the oppression of low wages, inevitable poverty, and a disgusting serfdom, a rich master, a poor servant, and a mean population. Such is the story of manufacturing in old England, and such is the story of manufacturing in New-England."—Senate Document, No. 44, January, 1869.

There is, however, in the harsh criticism which the report of the Commissioner has evoked from yourself and others, something more than appears upon the surface. The Commissioner—as the result of his investigations, which he claims, in behalf of himself and his assistants, were fairly conducted, and without reference to the support of any theory—presented facts and figures, which proved that, while the aggregate wealth of the country was increasing as rapidly as at any former period, the distribution was most unequal among the people; that, under a system of inflated currency and indiscriminate taxation, the rich were becoming richer and the poor poorer; that the increase in the wages of the laborer had not been in proportion to the increase of his living; that the prices of all home products had been so advanced and maintained that exchanges in kind for foreign commodities had become nearly impossible, thus restricting the employment of shipping and rendering the continued export of gold and obligations of indebtedness indispensable; and finally, that, under the plea of protection to American industry, special and onerous taxes had been levied on certain articles which required no protection, to the resulting profit of the few, but to the detriment of the many. Soon after the publication of his report, it became evident from the [illegible] that if the facts were to be suppressed, legislation, looking to a lower range of duties on certain articles—like pig-iron, salt and lumber, the raw materials for more extensive but less favored industries—could not long be averted. Such a movement, however, threatened the profits of many wealthy and powerful manufacturers, and left to their immediate representatives but two methods of procedure, viz.: either to directly disprove the statements of the Commissioner in reference to the profit of certain special interests, or indirectly to attack and so damage his reputation for truth, fairness and capacity as to deprive his deductions hereafter of all weight and influence with the public.

The former method has not been adopted. On the other hand, attention is sought to be diverted from the true issue by criticising the statements of the Commissioner in respect to wages, rents and the prices of commodities, although these matters chiefly concern the question of currency, and in them the Commissioner may be right or wrong without affecting the justice of his conclusions in respect to the influence of an excessive and indiscriminate tariff.

The attempt is also made to disparage the Commissioner by denominating him a free trader; although, in his report, he most distinctly stated that investigation had led him to the conclusion "that a policy of moderate and judicious protection under the tariff is certainly, for the present, the policy best suited to subserve the industrial interests of the whole country;" and again, "that the requirements of the government for revenue must certainly, for the present, necessitate so high an average of duties as to afford all that can be reasonably asked for on the grounds of protection."

Furthermore, it not having been found sufficient to resort to legitimate evidence, such as the statistics of savings banks, and the like, to disprove the capacity of the Commissioner for the discharge of his official duties, you have scrutinized with almost microscopic care the twenty-seven pages of closely-printed tables contained in the report, and having found one single paragraph, where, either in copying or proof-reading, the decimal point has been, through inadvertence, carried one place further to the right than was proper, you cite this (see page 10 of your speech) as conclusive that no amount of evidence could give to the Commissioner's figures "the character for respectability or weight of authority." As well might the Commissioner refer to a recent public statement of Hon. WILLIAM D. KELLEY, (see Washington Chronicle, Feb. 22,) "that in one savings bank in the City of New-York, in the year 1867, between ninety and one hundred millions were deposited," as an evidence of the gentleman's want of acquaintance with his subject; when to do this would be most unfair, inasmuch as the fact, that the total aggregate deposits in all the savings banks of the City of New-York was on the 1st of January, 1867, only eighty-six millions, was too well known to admit of the idea of intentional misstatement on the part of any one.

In conclusion, I beg to express to you my thanks for the opportunity which your speech has afforded me of contributing something of additional information in respect to those great questions which so intimately concern the welfare of the whole people, and also of explaining some matters in connection with my late report which events have shown were liable to a misinterpretation. I am, yours, respectfully,

DAVID A. WELLS,
U. S. Special Commissioner of Revenue.

The Confidence Game.

EDWARD BURKE, THOMAS CLELLAN, JOHN MIDDEN, JOHN BURNSIDE and EDWARD BONCHELL, came from Ogdensburg to this City on Tuesday, and formed the acquaintance of GEO. P. CLARK, who so well succeeded in gaining their confidence that he induced them to accompany him to CROOK'S Hotel in Chatham-street. CLARK promised to call again, and when he returned they informed him that they were going to California. He told his intended victims that he was acquainted with the Agent of the California Steamship Company, and could obtain their tickets below the usual rate. The proposed voyageurs gave him $70 each, and started with him to the office, when CLARK made an excuse to go across the street, when he ran away. The Police have been searching for the swindler without success.

The East River Bridge.

Brevet Major-Generals NEWTON, WRIGHT and KING met yesterday at Army Headquarters, in Greene-street, as a Commission from Government to consider the feasibility of the East River bridge. They will meet daily for perhaps a month. The chief consideration will probably be the obstruction of the bridge to navigation. The Commission will doubtless be satisfied as to the feasibility of its construction and great utility.
